TRUSTEE GETS COURT ORDER TO SUE FRISCO LINE BANKERS

E. N. Brown Also to Be Defendant in Action to Recover $11,000,000
Lost Dealing in Stocks of Other Lines.

ALLEGED BREACH OF OBLIGATION

Hearings, Which Disclosed
Big Profits to Financiers, Paved Way for Step—
in New York.

An order directing John G. Lonsdale, trustee of the Frisco Railroad, to file suits against the railroad's New York bankers, Speyer & Co. and J. & W. Seligman & Co., E. N. Brown, chairman of the Frisco board and others for recovery of losses sustained by the Frisco in purchases of other railroad stocks was issued today by Federal Judge Paris on Lonsdale's application.

The Frisco lost about $11,000,000 in the stock transactions, which were handled through Speyer & Co. at Brown's request, with Seligman & Co. participating in one of the two deals. The transactions were in stock of the Rock Island and Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroads. Suits are to be filed, under the court's order, by Frank A. Thompson, attorney for Lonsdale, his law associate, Ivan H. Light, the New York law firm of Wollman & Wollman and Robert G. Starr, of New York. It is considered likely the suits will be filed in New York.

In his application for leave to file, Lonsdale said that after a thorough investigation, the attorneys had advised him that in their opinion there had been a breach of fiduciary obligations by the prospective defendants.

Hearings Laid Foundation. Foundation for the legal action was laid in hearings before Federal Court masters here and in New York, at which Thompson questioned officers, directors and the New York bankers of the railroad about its financial management before the receivership of Nov. 1, 1932.

Testimony concerned chiefly the purchases by the Frisco, with heavy losses, of large blocks of stock in the Rock Island and Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroads and of directors' declaration of dividends in the autumn of 1930 when the Frisco was pinched for cash, and was forced to cut operating expenses to the "danger point," and was put in the position of having subsequently to borrow from banks to pay part of the dividends.

In the Rock Island transaction, which resulted in a loss of $10,000,000 to the Frisco through depreciation in the market value of the stock for which the Frisco paid out and securities, the New York bankers made profits of about $2,000,000. It was disclosed, Thompson brought out that the profit of Speyer & Co. was $2,000,000 and that of Seligman & Co. was $2,000,000.

Bankers' Profit, Road's Loss. The bankers profited by selling the Rock Island holding as the market advanced, while the Frisco lost on its shares as they dropped below the purchase price. The Frisco also made through Speyer & Co. the Frisco lost about $900,000 through depreciation of the stock in the market. The purchase was completed in the spring of 1930 on order of Chairman Brown, who was not approved by directors the following December when the stock, acquired at $38 a share, dropped on the market to $13 a share.

Brown testified he had reported the plan for the purchase to the four directors, constituting, with himself, a majority of the Executive Committee of the board and they had approved it informally.

Dividends declared in 1930 amounted to $4,250,000 and four dividends were paid. The four dividends of the railroad were "written down" in the 1936 reorganization, contending that if assets were overvalued by this amount the Frisco never had a surplus to support dividends.

SAMUEL INSULL FINALLY FREED OF ALL CHARGES

He and Son and H. L. Stuart Acquitted of Bankruptcy Law Violation by U. S. Judge Knox.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 14.—Federal Judge John C. Knox directed the jury in the bankruptcy law violation of Samuel Insull, his son, Samuel Insull Jr., and Harold L. Stuart today to return a verdict of acquittal for all three defendants. "Under the proof submitted by the Government the hypothesis of the defendants' innocence is as great as that of their guilt," Judge Knox said.

Samuel Insull Sr., who seemed surprised by the suddenness of the decision, smiled and said: "All I can say is that I'm happy and I'm through." Acquittal marked the end of the Government's attempt to convict Insull of a crime in connection with the collapse of his utilities holding companies.

As the State also has finished its prosecution of him, Insull was free today of all criminal charges for the first time since he was extradited from Turkey a year ago.

The Government had rested its case after devoting less than two days to the presentation of evidence in support of its charge that Insull and his co-defendants had transferred assets of the Corporation Securities Co. in contemplation of bankruptcy.

The first indication that a directed motion was in prospect came when Judge Knox asked Prosecutor David Cahill: "How are you going to push over the presumption of innocence? Was not what was done here as consistent with innocence as guilt? We must take under consideration the condition prevailing in 1931-1932." Judge Knox then instructed the jurors to bring in the verdict.

The Insulls and Stuart shook hands with the jurors and the 75-year-old senior defendant smiled and said: "As far as I know, this is my last trial." On the heels of this victory came a formal announcement that the Federal Government would drop the same charge against Samuel Insull's younger brother and business protege, Martin Insull, Assistant Attorney-General Keenan, chief of the Government's criminal prosecutions, said the Government would halt the proceedings now under way to extradite Martin Insull from Canada.

CIGARETTE INDORSEER FILES SUIT FOR $575,000 DAMAGES

Crawford Burton, New York Sportsman, Charges Advertisement Held Him Up to Ridicule.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Crawford Burton, sportsman and member of the New York Stock Exchange, has filed suits for damages totaling $575,000 as the result of a Camel cigarette advertisement which he charges held him up to scorn and ridicule, it was disclosed today.

Burton alleges that a photograph of himself in the advertisement represented him as appearing in an indecent pose and as having a "physical deformity" and "mental perversion." Further, he charges, the picture has subjected him to ridicule and has caused him to lose business. He also charges that the advertisement made him the "utterer of obscene matter."

Defendants in the actions are the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., the Crowell Publishing Co. and the advertising firm of William Esty & Co.

The advertisement in which Burton indorsed the cigarettes appeared in 65 newspapers and magazines last fall and winter.

Replying to the plaintiff's allegations, the Esty Co. said that Burton had accepted $500 last Aug. 2 for the use of his name and photographs.

Six Policemen Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, June 14.—Rioters injured 12 persons, looted a grocery and damaged street cars and police squad cars early today in a renewal of street car strike violence. Police restored order with tear gas.

The police estimated that 2000 strike sympathizers took part in today's riots in South Omaha. In similar disorders yesterday three persons were shot and hundreds, including a six-month-old infant, gassed.

The riotous crowd, which got beyond control of the reinforced police detail assigned, to the South Omaha district as a result of Wednesday night's disorders, pelted street cars and police automobiles, smashed street lights, and injured six policemen, at least two street car passengers, and four street car operators.

Numerous disorders have occurred since the strike began April 10. The street car employees walked out after demands for higher pay and the closed shop were refused.

MITCHELL PUTS IT UP TO ROOSEVELT TO DISCHARGE HIM

President Has Asked Springfield (Mo.) Man to Re-sign as Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

BUT HE REFUSES TO VACATE POSITION

Doesn't Like Way Department Is Run—Senators Clark and Truman Urge His Ouster.

By MARQUESS W. CHILDS, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Administration was still unsuccessful today in its efforts to remove Ewing Y. Mitchell of Springfield, Mo., from his post as Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Secretary of Commerce Roper had promised on Wednesday that he would have "results" to report today regarding the effort to get Mitchell, who for months has been an active opponent of many of Roper's policies, out of office. Today he said tersely, "No statement."

While Mitchell has consistently declined to make any comment, it became known today from sources within the Administration that President Roosevelt had asked Mitchell on May 30 for his resignation. The President gave as his reason the need to find a man of "broader executive and administrative experience."

Man Ready to Take the Job.

On the following day Col. J. Monroe Johnston of Columbia, S. C., announced in his home town that he had been asked to become Assistant Secretary of Commerce and that he had accepted the position.

Washington, Johnston is an engineer in Columbia and a high official in the American Legion. Roper is from South Carolina and has long been a factor in the politics of that State.

Plainly Johnston was destined to fill the vacancy left by Mitchell's resignation as the only other Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Dr. John Dickinson, is close to Roper and in very good standing with the Administration.

But Mitchell refused to resign. And he has thus far continued to refuse, despite all that Roper has been able to do to get him out. He is no longer consulted on affairs of importance in the bureau of which he is nominally the head. The street car employees walked out after demands for higher pay and the closed shop were refused.

Roosevelt's Personal Appointment.

Mitchell was a personal appointee of President Roosevelt. According to a statement made in New York last week by Tom Pendergast, Democratic boss of Missouri, Senator Bennett Clark was strongly opposed to Mitchell's being given the Commerce Department post and instead agreed at the request of the President not to oppose his confirmation in the Senate.

It is said that President Roosevelt gave Mitchell credit for swinging the Missouri delegation away from former Senator James A. Reed and to Roosevelt at the Democratic convention in Chicago in 1932, but Pendergast denied last week that Mitchell had been instrumental in bringing the Missourians into the Roosevelt camp, intimating that he was responsible for this.

Clark and Senator Truman, the junior Senator from Missouri, have been active in the effort to remove Mitchell. They talked to President Roosevelt some weeks ago and made it clear that they wanted Mitchell removed. At a conference in New York Clark, Truman, Pendergast and Farley discussed Mitchell's removal. The latter was one of Pendergast's bitterest enemies in the 1934 campaign in Missouri, giving out a scorching interview in Kansas City denouncing "Bossism" and Pendergast rule.

In New York, just before he sailed on the Normandie, Pendergast denied that he had been personally interested in getting Mitchell ousted. He ascribed the movement to Clark. According to Pendergast, Roper informed Clark that Mitchell "could not get along with the other men in the Department of Commerce."

Mitchell has said that he has not been informed of any charges against him. He was appointed in June of 1933. At that time he let it be known that he had sought a ministerial post, either in Belgium or some other European country, and had accepted the position in the Department of Commerce only when he had been in effect "drafted."

Mitchell Makes Charges.

In reply to President Roosevelt's letter of May 30, it is known that Mitchell had said:

DEAD IN GERMAN MUNITIONS BLAST OFFICIALLY 52

Statement Announces All but Seven Bodies Have Been Recovered From Reinsdorf Factory.

375 INJURED,
73 SERIOUSLY

Public Funeral Monday for Victims—Washroom Fire Said to Have Caused Explosions.

By the Associated Press.

WITTENBERG, Germany, June 14.—With the official death list remaining at 52, rescuers worked in shifts until darkness set in tonight to drag bodies out of the wreckage of the Westfalia-Anhalt munitions factory at Reinsdorf, three miles from here.

The ruins still were hot from the explosion and subsequent fire which destroyed a large section of the factory yesterday afternoon when rescuers had accounted for 45 of the announced dead. Officials said that only seven more bodies remained hidden under the debris.

Of the 375 officially reported injured, 73 of the more seriously hurt were in hospitals while at least 100 had gone to their homes.

Apparently only one woman was killed. She was a farmer's wife working in a field two-thirds of a mile from the factory. She was struck in the back by a flying missile and fatally injured.

Hitler Sends $40,000.

Dr. Wilhelm Frick, Minister of the Interior, inspected the rescue work today and brought with him Reichsfuehrer Hitler's condolences. Hitler, himself, sent 100,000 marks—about $40,000—of his own funds to relieve the suffering at Reinsdorf.

Preparations were made to bury the dead Monday with a large public funeral.

The Labor Front and the Ministry of the Interior donated 60,000 marks—about $24,000—for the widows and orphans. The factory will pay the funeral bills.

The people in the affected area went about their customary work and, with the exception of the holes in the roofs and the smashed window panes in the Reinsdorf homes, 1000 yards from the factory, everything looked normal in the little munitions village.

Hospital Kept Busy.

The Paul Gerhardt Hospital in Wittenberg, where most of the injured lie, was besieged all day by anxious relatives. Constant streams of men with bandaged heads and arms filed in and out seeking fresh dressings for their wounds.

Wittenberg itself, despite its distance from the explosion, suffered material damage. Nine large store windows were broken in one block alone. They are near the Schloss Church on the door of which on Oct. 13, 1517, Martin Luther nailed his famous theses which marked the beginning of the reformation.

Not Saboteur, Leader Says.

Otto Holdenreith, Nazi district leader, said:

"It is out of the question for any act of sabotage to have been committed. Our workers have been most carefully selected, so it was impossible for any saboteur to have been admitted."

Smoke lay over the entire region and minor explosions continued for seven hours after the original blast. The factory is so large that the laborers in one section were able to return to work today while others formed rescue crews. The factory is about three-quarters of a mile long and one-quarter mile wide. The section where explosives were made occupied one end of the plant.

Dr. Sommer, the district governor, in an official statement, said that only this end was destroyed and that the plant's production would not be greatly affected. Only ordinary explosives such as are used in hand grenades were made in the plant, apparently.

"The catastrophe," said Dr. Sommer, "is laid to a fire in a washroom which spread to the explosives. One detonation sufficed to scatter hot material and another followed with direful results."

All shops in Wittenberg were closed this afternoon.

An official communique said that the buildings in the rest of the factory beyond the part demolished showed damage but that it was hoped they could be restored.

The burgomaster called it "the greatest catastrophe in Central Germany's history."

"Among the last to leave the town were the telephone operators," he said. "They stuck to their posts."

REORGANIZATION SOUGHT BY POSTAL TELEGRAPH CO.

Petition Granted Under Federal Bankruptcy Laws—Statement of Reasons to Be Issued Later.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—A petition for reorganization under Section 77-B of the national bankruptcy laws was filed in Federal court by the Postal Telegraph Cable Co. today.

It was said at the offices of the company that a statement explaining the reasons for the action would be issued later. The action came as no surprise to Wall Street, however, for it has been known that the company was considering some means of ending its long succession of deficits resulting from inability to earn its fixed charges.

Gen. G. S. Gibbs, president, in his report to stockholders a month ago said that the corporation was giving careful consideration to what action should be taken in the light of the condition, "particularly with reference to the next interest payment which is due in July." He explained that bond interest had been met for some time through borrowing from International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation, the parent company, and through liquidation of assets.

The $120,000,000 corporation was formed in 1928 as a holding company for the MacKay companies, which were then brought under operation and control of I. T. & T. The Postal Telegraph & Cable System comprises a network of telegraph lines extending throughout the United States and 37,000 nautical miles of submarine telegraph cables extending from the United States to points in Europe and the Far East. Through a subsidiary, MacKay Radio, the company also has an extensive radio communications business.

Federal Judge Cox signed an order approving the petition for reorganization and continuing the present management and control.

SECRETARY DERN WILL REPRIMAND AIR CORPS CHIEF

Report Says Gen. Foulis Gave 'Exaggerated, Unfair' Testimony to House Committee.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Secretary Dorn today cleared Major-General Benjamin D. Foulis of charges made against him by the House Military Committee, and refused to remove him as chief of the Army Air Corps.

An official War Department statement said, however, that the Inspector General's report on the Foulis case had found that the chief of air corps had given "exaggerated, unfair and misleading statements to a congressional committee" and on those grounds Secretary Dorn will reprimand Gen. Foulis.

The announcement said the report of Major-General John F. Preston, Inspector General, might be summarized under three headings:

"1. Violation of existing laws in the purchase of airplanes and aircraft materials.

"2. Unsound estimates made to the Postoffice Department as to the condition of readiness of the Army Air Corps to fly the air mail.

"3. Incorrect, unfair and misleading statements to a congressional committee.

"The Inspector-General found with regard to these allegations, first, that the evidence adduced did not establish that Gen. Foulis violated existing laws in the purchase of airplanes and aircraft materials; second, that there was no cause for censure in Gen. Foulis' opinion statements with regard to the capacity of his corps to fly the air mail, and, third, Gen. Foulis did depart from the ethics and standards of the service by making exaggerated, unfair and misleading statements to a congressional committee.

"This completes all of the special investigations which the Inspector-General has been conducting."

The Foulis case began more than a year ago as the result of a grand jury and House subcommittee investigation of alleged irregularities in War Department procurement.

OFFICIAL REPORT HOLDS EMPLOYEES PARTLY TO BLAME

Secretary of Commerce Roper Says Bad Weather Was Chief Cause but Declares Personnel Contributed Thereto.

INCORRECT WEATHER WARNINGS ISSUED

Not Enough Reserve Fuel, Radio Not Working Properly When Senator Cutting and Four Others Were Killed.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
201-206 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—While bad weather condition was given as the chief cause of the air liner crash in which United States Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico and four others were killed and eight persons were seriously injured, near Macon, Mo., May 6, personnel of the TWA air line was blamed for contributory causes by Secretary of Commerce Roper in a statement summarizing the results of an investigation made by the Bureau of Air Commerce.

As a result of the investigation, Roper said, charges of violating five of the regulations governing air navigation would be filed against TWA. Part of the blame for the crash is placed on "inaccurate weather forecasts from both the United States Weather Bureau and the company meteorologist."

"I am convinced that the accident was due chiefly to bad weather conditions," Roper said, and then proceeded to specific indictments of individuals involved in the operation of the plane.

He listed as "contributory causes" the accident "improper clearance by TWA ground personnel of the plane from Albuquerque; improper control of the plane by the same personnel after the departure from Albuquerque; error on the part of the pilot in proceeding after he was unable to effectively communicate with the ground and failure of the TWA ground personnel at Kansas City to expeditiously redispach the plane to a field where a safe landing might be effected."

Senate to Make Inquiry.

Through the efforts of Senator Johnson (Rep.), California, the Senate recently voted to investigate the crash in which Cutting was killed and other recent air accidents involving fatalities.

"We are going into this to the end," Johnson, one of Cutting's closest friends in the Senate, said yesterday. "Nothing will stop us."

Numerous reports have reached Johnson and others in the Senate regarding the Bureau of Air Commerce and the failure of officials to furnish adequate weather information to planes in service on American air lines.

"I do not care to make any comment on these reports at this time," Johnson said. "We expect to begin our investigation very soon and then we shall go into all these rumors that have been current since Senator Cutting's death."

The Senate voted $10,000 for the investigation. Senators named by the Senate were Sen. Copeland (Dem.), New York, chairman of the Committee on Commerce, to conduct the investigation are Clark, Donahay, White, Johnson and Copeland himself. They have not yet chosen a chairman.

More Details of Report.

"The two pilots, Bolton and Greenon, made every possible effort to land their passengers safely," Roper said, "but were unable to do so because of the prevailing fog and darkness."

Bolton and Greenon, both killed in the crash, are the only two individuals involved in the crash who are mentioned by name. Bolton, according to Roper, had not been approved for "duty for scheduled operations on the Western Division," having been for nearly a year before the accident on the Kansas-City Newark run. Nor had

SOCIAL SECURITY BILL OPPOSED IN SENATE DEBATE

Harrison Asks for Early Action but Efforts to Kill or Amend Program Are Indicated.

HALE ASSAILS IT AS 'SOCIALISTIC'

Hastings Finds 'Discrimination Against the Young'; Clark Wants a Better Balance.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Senate discussion of the administration's "social security" program was launched today by Chairman Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee. His expressed hope for prompt action on the proposed legislation was glimmering, however, as various Senators divulged plans to amend or defeat it.

The bill proposes to aid the aged, the unemployed, needy dependent children, crippled children, blind persons, homeless children, needy mothers, and to furnish financial assistance to a variety of state health and service agencies which lack sufficient funds to operate satisfactorily.

Senator Hastings (Rep., Delaware), contends the bill goes entirely too far in the direction of Government aid. Huey Long (Dem., Louisiana), contends that it does go far enough. Senator Clark (Dem., Missouri), holds that it fails to preserve a proper balance between public and private security plans. Some of the Southern Senators profess anxiety over its bearing on states' rights. The House has already passed it, but in radically different form.

Against Major Causes.

Senator Harrison, in asking for its immediate passage, described it as an attempt "to initiate a permanent program of assistance to citizens in meeting some of the major economic hazards of life." He contended that "it is impossible to meet all social problems with this legislation, because some are not within the purview of Federal legislation, and because it was decided that it should be directed only against the major causes of insecurity."

Foremost in the list of plans projected by the bill is an emergency old-age pension plan, under which the Government would contribute $15 a month for each $15 or more contributed by states having old-age pension systems approved by the Federal Government, to be used in paying pensions of $30 or more per month to persons over 65 years old. For its share the Government would appropriate $19,750,000.

Supplementary Payments.

Supplementing the emergency plan, the bill would establish a permanent system of contributory old-age pensions, to be paid out of a reserve gradually accumulated by the Federal Government and the states. The Government's share would come from a payroll tax, to be assessed equally against workers and employers, starting at 1 per cent in 1937, and reaching a maximum of 3 per cent in 1948, and such assessments would be necessary to maintain the reserve.

For illustration, Harrison said that under the plan, a person whose average salary has been $100 a month could retire at the age of 65 and receive the following monthly pension: $17.50, when he had paid taxes 5 years; $22.50, when he had paid taxes 10 years; $32.50, when he had paid taxes 20 years; and $42.50, when he had paid taxes 30 years.

Replying to comments that it seemed like a long hard pull for a comparatively small degree of security, he said it was at least a start in the right direction, and represented all that the Government and the states could undertake at the present time. He was confident that better times would enable the benefits to be greatly enlarged.

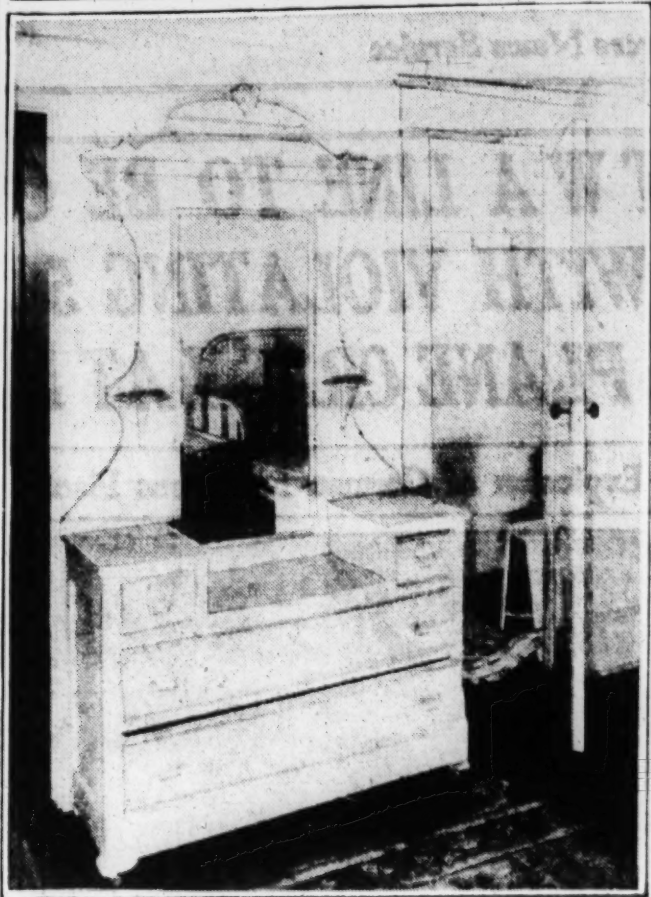

Unemployment Insurance.

When the bill comes to the problem of unemployment insurance, it again resorts to the device of Federal aid for states having insurance systems satisfactory to the Federal Government. And again the payroll is called upon to meet the cost of the Federal Government's share. An excise tax would be levied upon the employers of four or more persons, beginning this year and payable next year. The tax would be one per cent the first year, 2 per cent the second, and 3 per cent the third and succeeding years.

For assistance to the states for the care of needy, dependent children, the bill would appropriate $24,750,000 for the year ending June 30, 1936, provided states expended the funds in a manner deemed suitable by the Federal Government. "The relief survey," Harrison said, "indicates there are now about 350,000 broken homes, attributable to destitution, with 700,000 children who are being supported by relief. With relief no longer available, it will be necessary to place these children in institutions."

As to needy, dependent children not placed in public institutions, the bill provides payments not to exceed $18 a month for the first such child, nor $12 for each additional child maintained in the same home. Appropriations would be made of $3,800,000 to aid states in providing material and child welfare, if they already have such services; $2,850,000 for medical, surgical, corrective and preventative treatment for crippled children or children threatened with crippling, "especially in rural areas suffering from economic distress"; $1,150,000 to enable the Children's Bureau to operate with state agencies in extending welfare services to homeless or neglected children; $841,000 this year and $1,938,000 for each succeeding year to co-operate with states in rehabilitation of workers disabled in industry; $5,000,000 to supplement state health services, and $3,000,000 a year to aid states in caring for the blind.

Would Create Board.

One of the most important features of the measure—and one calculated to provoke controversy—would create a Federal social security board with broad powers to supervise, inspect and partly administer the old-age pension and unemployment insurance systems which the measure essays to set up. It would have the duty of approving or rejecting the respective state systems, and therefore would possess power to withhold Federal grants.

The board would consist of three members, for a term of six years each, receiving salaries of $10,000 a year each, and forbidden to engage in any other business or occupation. Not more than two members could belong to one political party, and annual reports would be required by Congress.

Hastings and Hale Object.

Hastings objected that the old-age pension plan would "discriminate against the young in favor of the aged. Older men and women would receive more than they paid in at the expense of younger taxpayers," he said.

Harrison agreed, but declared he knew of no other principle for providing for the aged, and he didn't think the young would object. Senator Hale, stalwart Republican from Maine, assailed the entire program as essentially "Socialistic." He said the Roosevelt administration had filled the capital with "socialistic agencies," and added: "If Mr. Roosevelt is renominated next year, it will be unnecessary for the Socialist party to put up a candidate."

"Nor does that mark the end of the Socialist endeavor to control the government of the United States. We are now told that Prof. Glenn Frank and Mr. William Allen White, so-called liberals of the Republican party, are demanding the nomination of a 'liberal' for President next year."

"If that should happen, the American people would find themselves between the devil and the deep blue sea. Unless they wake up to the danger, they will find themselves faced with the choice of choosing between two Socialistic candidates."

Townpeople said they thought an earthquake had struck when the first explosion occurred at 3 p. m. Everybody rushed madly into the streets.

The munitions plant was working at full force, and some workers were hurled through windows by the first shock.

All roads leading to the factory were closed and telephone service was suspended. Six foreign correspondents who attempted to penetrate the area for official information were detained temporarily by secret police. A second great explosion occurred at 8:30 p. m. Firemen fought desperately to keep flames from spreading.

E. Y. MITCHELL PUTS IT UP TO ROOSEVELT TO DISMISS HIM

Mitchell countered with a series of charges regarding the conduct of the Department of Commerce and particularly concerning the Shipping Board Bureau. During his first five months as Assistant Secretary, Mitchell had jurisdiction over the Shipping Board Bureau, and he had not been consulted except regarding minor matters. After repeated clashes with officials of the bureau it was taken out of his charge.

Nominally Mitchell has had supervision over the Bureau of Air Commerce but he has not been consulted except regarding minor matters. Asked about the report on the air crash in which Senator Bronson Cutting was killed, made public today, Mitchell said he had not seen it.

Mitchell has watched for several weeks the contest between Mitchell and the administration. A number of Senators have been informed that the President would send the name of his successor to be confirmed as soon as Mitchell had been got out of the way.

Not Protected From Removal.

So far as the law is concerned, Mitchell can be removed from office either with or without cause. He is not protected from removal as employees of such independent bureaus as the Federal Trade Commission.

Roper was absent from his office for nearly two weeks making a series of speeches on the West Coast. He said on Wednesday that he had not had an opportunity to discuss the Mitchell ouster with the President since his return.

The Secretary spent some time with President Roosevelt yesterday but apparently no satisfactory conclusion was reached. Today Roper held out a vague promise that he might have an announcement about Mitchell to make tomorrow.

To his intimates Mitchell has made no secret of his dissatisfaction with the way in which the Department of Commerce has been conducted. He has sent numerous memoranda to Roper protesting against acts in the bureau over which he has had nominal supervision.

"I have no comment to make," Mitchell said.

A man of somewhat less than middle age, with long experience as a lawyer in Missouri and in Washington, Mitchell has never been a conspicuous figure in the New Deal. He has lived quietly in a downtown hotel and has only occasionally been associated with outstanding New Dealers.

Because he made a point of pressing Mitchell's appointment, despite the reluctance of the head of the Missouri delegation in Congress, President Roosevelt is put in somewhat embarrassing position by having to fire him. But since Mitchell refuses to resign, there is nothing else to do if the post is to be filled by Johnson.

AUTOMOBILE TAKING PLACE OF ELEPHANTS IN INDIA

Families Who Considered Them Essential to Social Position Turning to Cars.

By the Associated Press.

TRIVANDRUM, India, June 14.—Elephants as a means of locomotion are becoming fewer in India because of the growing use of automobiles. "Running costs" of elephants, too, have increased.

Seventeen cow elephants recently caught in pits were released on account of the slump in the demand.

Aristocratic families in Travancore and Malabar, the elephant country of Southern India, formerly considered the possession of at least one elephant indispensable for the maintenance of their social position. They have now turned to motorcycles.

HOUSE PASSES, ROOSEVELT SIGNS NRA MEASURE

Vote on Bill for Extension Until Next April 1 of Abbreviated Act Is 336 to 31.

ONLY 40 MINUTES SPENT IN DEBATE

Not Even the Full Hour Allowed Is Utilized—Sunday Night Was Deadline for Action.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Racing against a Sunday night deadline, the House today agreed to Senate amendments to the resolution extending an abbreviated National Industrial Recovery law to next April 1, and sent the measure to President Roosevelt, who signed it late today.

The bill was passed after only 40 minutes of heated debate. Not even the full hour allowed for debate was utilized. The Republicans apparently conceding that their attempts to defeat the huge House Democratic majority would be unsuccessful.

The vote for the NRA resolution was 336 to 31. Twenty Republicans and 11 Democrats voted against the resolution: Democrats voting against were: Carpenter, Kansas; Cartwright, Oklahoma; Castellow, Georgia; Deen, Georgia; Ferguson, Oklahoma; Fernandez, Louisiana; Gray, Indiana; Griswold, Indiana; Ludlow, Indiana; McInerney, Louisiana; and Roper, Oklahoma.

When the special resolution accepting the Senate amendment to the measure was called up, Representative Michener (Rep., Michigan), remarked: "Unless I am mistaken, only one rule like this has ever been brought before the House. This is a rarefied type of gag rule."

The Harrison-Borah anti-trust amendment, said Representative Jenkins (Rep., Ohio), "improves the law by three degrees."

"We Republicans contend," he asserted, "that the NRA either should be continued or allowed to die and should not be extended in this half-dead shape."

Jenkins added that the "President will never live long enough to stop what he could with the NRA. His remarks he made about a constitutional amendment" replacing NRA.

Most of the talk was about the Borah anti-trust amendment, but the Democrats, among them Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, held that "adding nothing to and subtracting nothing from the House bill."

The real purpose of the extension, Doughton asserted, was to "give further time for a further study" of what could be done since the court held NRA unconstitutional.

Treasury Stand on Contracts.

The Treasury was disclosed to be requesting that bidders for Government contracts agree in advance to abide by hour and wage standards yet to be given the force of law by Congress.

A letter to the "heads of all departments and establishments" signed by C. J. Pepples, director of procurement, and approved by Secretary Morgenthau, recommended on June 7 that all invitations for bids include the following stipulation:

"Bids are requested on the basis that if subsequent legislation shall require observance of minimum wage and maximum hours of employment and or limitation as to age of employees, in the performance of Government contracts, any contract entered into shall be subject to modification to accord with such statutory requirements to the extent authorized by law."

"It is understood," said the peoples letter, "that it is the intention of the President to submit to Congress at an early date legislation which would require provision to be made on every Government contract that all persons engaged in the production of the supplies or in the carrying out of the contract, shall be paid in accordance with minimum wage and maximum hours standards, and that no person under the age of 16 years shall be employed; the same law to apply to the use of Government loans or grants made by the United States, or any agency thereof, to municipal, subdivision, person or corporation."

Charges to Be Filed Against the TWA

Bolton taken the quarterly medical examination required by the regulations of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Roper said. Gresson, Roper stated, did not have a "scheduled air transport rating."

"The tanks of the Sky Chief, Roper said, listing count No. 4 against TWA, "contained only a 27-minute reserve fuel supply when the crash occurred. When the fact was available at Kansas City that the ceiling was lower than the authorized minimum, which was while the plane was in the vicinity of Wichita, the Kansas City dispatcher should have grounded the ship at Wichita for fuel and further instructions. Instead, he allowed the plane to proceed into weather conditions which required a flight of a greater distance than permitted landing with the required 45-minute reserve fuel supply."

The Radio Transmitter.

Count No. 5 against the air line is set forth by Roper as follows: "Official records show that the Sky Chief's radio transmitter was not functioning at night frequency when the plane cleared Albuquerque and that the official weather forecast indicated that instrument flying would be required along the route. The pilot's log also shows a notation made by Co-Pilot Gresson, somewhere between Albuquerque and Kansas City, to the effect that the transmitter was out and the receiver was carrying very weak. Therefore, in view of the regulation requiring a two-way radio, the pilot should have landed at the nearest intermediate station, either Amarillo, Tex., or Wichita, Kan."

"The plane," Roper added, "also was directed by the TWA dispatcher at Kansas City to attempt a landing there despite the fact that the ceiling had fallen to below 700 feet, the minimum ceiling for landing down through to Kansas City appearing in the company's approved operation manual. If the pilot had followed these instructions, it would have been a violation."

Neither Roper nor Director Eugene Vidal of the Bureau of Air Commerce had any fault to find, "after searching inquiry," with the Department of Commerce navigation aids and personnel in the area over which the lane was being flown. In this connection, Roper points out, the Department of Commerce "is not a polling body."

"It does not have an inspection force of sufficient size to apprehend violations the moment they occur or to be able to prevent all violations," he added. "It exercises constant vigilance to set up regulations which will improve air line operations and, with the co-operation of operating companies and private flyers, enforces them stringently. Bureau regulations, particularly covering safety in flying, are stricter today than they ever have been before in history."

Roper's statement and Vidal's report are based on a lengthy investigation into the crash. At Macon, Mo., examiners for the Bureau of Air Commerce heard 25 witnesses and in Kansas City 34 others testified about the accident.

The report of the accident board of the Bureau of Air Commerce says the plane was not trying to land at the time of the crash.

"The position and condition of the various parts of the wreckage, including propellers, wing flaps, landing gear, fuel and oil supply, as well as marks on the ground, all indicate that the airplane was in normal flight until the moment the wing tip dragged on the ground," the report says.

"The airman of Pilot Bolton and Gresson, which overcame all save the last obstacle, and Pilot Bolton's efforts for the welfare of his passengers after the accident are to be commended," the report says.

The Accident Board Lists a Weather Bureau Forecast which failed to "predict the hazardous weather that developed during the latter part of the forecast period" as one of the contributory causes of the accident. The other contributory causes listed by the board are all concerned with the failure of TWA personnel.

"It is the opinion of the Accident Board," says the report, "that the probable direct cause of this accident was an unintentional collision with the ground while the airplane was being maneuvered at a very low altitude in fog and darkness."

One Regulation Waived.

The Sky Chief accident occurred, Roper said, on a run on which the Bureau of Air Commerce had granted a waiver of the regulation providing a maximum daily flying time of eight hours for first pilots. Roper added, at the request of TWA pilots and executives because the Los Angeles-Kansas City eastbound run has a scheduled flying time of eight hours and 15 minutes.

"Thus," said Roper, "the waiver permitted the company to work its first pilots a short time in excess of the regular eight-hour day and thus enabled them to complete the run with one first pilot. The custom of this company, it should be noted, was not to work its pilots coming under the waiver rule more than 100 hours in any single month."

"Despite the fact that this run was being operated under a waiver, nothing has been developed in any of the testimony taken in connection with the accident to indicate that either First Pilot Bolton or Co-Pilot Gresson was suffering from fatigue which in any way contributed to the accident."

"In fairness to the company," Roper added, "it also should be stated that Pilot Bolton had the reputation of being a high-class pilot and that he had an extended rest period before taking out the Sky Chief on its ill-fated flight. He had gone to the Coast as pilot of a chartered plane, and his selection for this important assignment is indicative of the confidence placed in him by his company. During the three months prior to the accident he had flown an average of only 83 hours monthly. He had not been on any sort of flight duty during the five days immediately preceding his shipping as pilot of the Sky Chief."

As one result of the crash in which Cutting was killed the Bureau of Air Commerce has rescinded the provision permitting the eight-hour requirement to be waived and a "thorough inquiry" of its effect on pilots is being made, Roper said.

Rules for Dispatchers.

"Careful study of conditions surrounding the accident indicate the advisability," Roper declared, "of the Bureau continuing to strengthen its regulations regarding the employment of thoroughly qualified dispatchers by companies. This arm of the air service received special attention in the revision of regulations on Oct. 1, 1934, when, for the first time in the history of the bureau, approval of dispatchers by the bureau was made obligatory. The bureau now is convinced that their responsibilities should be made more exact and that only men of the highest type should be appointed."

The Department of Commerce is doing everything possible to make flying safer, Roper said in the conclusion of his report. He was basing his statement, he said, on 607 pages of testimony taken at the hearings in Missouri and on charts, maps, logs, photographs and other exhibits accumulated in the investigation.

The text of Secretary of Commerce Roper's statement on the cause of the TWA Sky Chief crash will be found on page 6A.

TWA President Defends Line's Equipment and Personnel.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Jack Frye, president of Transcontinental and Western Air, today defended the equipment of the air liner which crashed near Macon, Mo., on May 6 and the plane personnel and attributed the accident to "false" weather reports by the Bureau of Air Commerce observer at Kirksville.

In a statement issued at his offices, Frye said, on learning of the findings of the Department of Commerce:

"Transcontinental and Western Air people are amazed at the reported findings of the accident board of the Bureau of Air Commerce as to the causes of the airplane accident on May 6, 1935, near Atlanta, Mo."

"The evidence at the public hearing of the Bureau of Air Commerce clearly showed that Transcontinental and Western Air was in no wise at fault in the handling of this flight and that the accident occurred because of no failure of equipment or company personnel."

"These facts were clearly established before the accident board by the employees of the air line and independently proved by records kept by the United States Weather Bureau, reports made by the Bureau of Air Commerce observers at Kirksville and Kansas City, by the log of the plane itself, and in testimony of many disinterested witnesses who testified at Macon and Kansas City.

"These hearings definitely established the fact that the real cause of the accident was the Pilot Bolton, when he neared the field at Kirksville, attempted to come down through a ceiling reported by the Bureau of Air Commerce observer at Kirksville as 7000 feet with four miles' visibility and lowered, scattered clouds at 1200 feet."

"What he actually found was practically a zero-zero condition, which in the parlance of air transportation means a total lack of ceiling and visibility."

"The plane in question was not sent on to Kirksville until the company had telephoned the Bureau of Air Commerce observer on duty at the Kirksville field and had the observer confirm his previous report as to weather conditions."

"Had weather conditions been as reported, the pilot of the plane would have found a safe landing at the Kirksville field."

MRS. FRANK NASH TESTIFIES AT TRIAL OF ADAM RICHIETTI

Widow of Escaped Convict Killed With Four Officers at Kansas City Station Takes Stand.

AGAIN TELLS STORY OF LIFE WITH HIM

Prosecutor Says Three Witnesses Will Place Defendant at Scene Before the Machinegunning.

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 14.—

The widow of Frank Nash, killed with four officers at Union Station here June 17, 1933, again today told her life with the escaped convict, whom she knew as "Slim" Miller, at the trial of Adam Richetti for murder in connection with the machinegunning.

Nash had testified previously before a Federal court trial of six persons accused of conspiring to kidnap Nash from the officers. She was now on probation, having pleaded guilty of the conspiracy.

Before Mrs. Nash was called to the stand, W. W. Graves Jr., County Prosecutor, said he would produce three witnesses who would testify to the morning of the killings.

The Government contends that Richetti, "Pretty Boy" Floyd and "Slim" Miller, the latter two now dead, were the three men who machinegunned the officers.

Graves said the three who will testify are Mrs. Lottie Nash, the Travelers Aid Bureau and two Federal agents, F. J. Lackey and E. J. Verrelli. The agents were wounded in the fire that killed Nash and his captors.

Mrs. Nash's Story.
Mrs. Nash, who insists upon being called Mrs. Miller—again repeated her story of an intimate relationship between Richetti and Verne Miller and Vivian Miller, which led to her calling on Miller for aid when Nash was arrested in Hot Springs, Ark., June 18, 1933.

Miller was killed near Detroit after the Union Station murders. Floyd was killed by officers in Ohio last fall.

Floyd Verne Miller at Kansas City, she testified. "I said, 'Verne, they got my 'Jelly.' My 'Jelly' is gone.'"

She telephoned, she said, from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Farmer at Joplin, Mo. The farmer, with Richard Tailmann, Gal-las of Hot Springs and his wife, Verne Miller, were all in the car when Nash was shot.

Later the night of June 16, Mrs. Miller testified, Verne Miller telephoned her from the Union Station and told her she would "see 'Jelly'."

He advised her to go home and wait for her mother to await developments, she said.

Myron H. Purvis, head of the department of justice bureau in Chicago, yesterday described at the trial of Richetti, the end of the campaign of "Pretty Boy" Floyd.

Also Seeking Floyd.
Purvis said he and three other agents went to Wellsville, Mo., June 21, 1934, to take Richetti into custody and to search for Floyd. He did not find Floyd on that day, he said, but two days later he came on the outlaw at a farmhouse eight miles from East Liverpool, Mo.

After Federal agents, local officers and myself were in motor car approaching the farmhouse," Purvis said, "I saw a car parked around a corner. Charles Arthur 'Pretty Boy' Floyd sat in the rear seat. The two cars containing us. We approached the house. I observed underneath the corner elevated about one and one-half feet on stilts, the feet of a man leaning over the car. I observed this man start to run. I recognized him as Charles Arthur (Pretty Boy) Floyd. I and others commanded him to halt. He continued to run. He was shot."

That Was All.
"That was all," Russell T. Boyle, assistant prosecutor asked.
"That was all," Purvis said. "He was 15 minutes later."

The State contends Richetti and Floyd fled eastward from Kansas after the Union Station killing. The defense attempted to show that State witnesses including Purvis had not been suspected in the killings at first. This Purvis denied, asserting Richetti had been named very early in the investigation. Verne Miller, killed by Richetti, was presumed to be the man with Floyd and Richetti. The State also named Jack Killgore, who was killed June 16, 1933, at Bolivar, Mo., as having been with Richetti and Floyd. He identified a machine gun, placed on exhibit at the trial, as the weapon Floyd used to kill him in their automobile when they forced him and Griffith, Clinton, Mo., to accompany them to Kansas City. The State contends the machine gun was used in the station killing. The two men were freed by Richetti in Kansas City the

IGOE LAW FIRM HIRED BY UNION ELECTRIC

Employment of City's No. 1 Democrat Rouses Interest in Political Circles.

Appointment of the law firm of Igoe, Carroll, Higgs & Keefe as counsel for the Union Electric Light & Power Co., one of the most lucrative legal employments in St. Louis, has occasioned considerable interest in professional and political circles.

The resignation of Theodore Rassieur, who had been the company's general counsel and a director for several years, preceded the announcement of the employment of the Igoe firm.

William L. Igoe, head of the law firm, is the No. 1 man in Democratic politics in St. Louis. He is president of the Police Board, having been appointed by Gov. Barks. He was elected to Congress from St. Louis in 1912 and served four terms. In 1925 he was the Democratic nominee for Mayor, but was defeated.

Other members of the firm are James E. Carroll, United States District Attorney here from 1916 to 1922; Vance J. Higgs, for many years active in Democratic politics, and Robert J. Keefe, also an active Democrat. Higgs was one of the legal advisers in the drafting of the Burford bill, so-called mystery bill, in the 1933 Legislature, the purpose of which was to abolish the State Public Service Commission and change the method of regulating public utilities.

Igoe's Political Success.
The dominance of Igoe in Democratic party affairs in St. Louis is of long standing. He is recognized as a master of campaign strategy. As a power in the inner councils of the party he has had a hand in all the recent Democratic successes in St. Louis. In 1922 he was chairman of the Democratic State Committee and also managed the senatorial campaign of James A. Reed. In 1928 he was St. Louis manager for the national Democratic campaign.

Igoe has not appeared openly in the internal dissension that has broken out in the Democratic city administration. He was a supporter of Mayor Dickmann for election, but it is known his feeling toward the Mayor has cooled. Those who know the power of Igoe are confident the recent ousting of Mayor Dickmann's friend, Robert E. Hannegan, as chairman of the City Committee, could not have been accomplished without the tacit approval of Igoe.

The 17 Aldermen who have turned their backs on Dickmann's leadership, are said to be hopeful of sympathy from Igoe. They are fighting the Mayor's policies, and some of them are said to have felt that Dickmann was leaning too much toward municipal ownership of public utilities, at least publicly.

Hastey's Record.
The anti-Dickmann group includes Alderman Hastey, chairman of the Public Utilities Committee of the Board. Last June, Hastey introduced a bill to tax power plants operated by corporations and institutions to supply their own electricity. It was charged by some Aldermen that this bill had the secret support of Union Electric Light & Power Co. The Board passed the bill, but the Mayor vetoed it and it was not repassed.

When the $16,100,000 bond issue was proposed two years ago, Mayor Dickmann suggested including an item of $750,000 for a power plant to supply electricity to city buildings, but the Ways and Means Committee of the Aldermen, dominated by Hastey and Aldermen Slay and Lietchen, struck it out. Measures of great importance to Union Electric are to come up soon in the Board of Aldermen. One is a pending bill to renew a contract for electricity for traffic signals and parking meters. It is proposed to extend this contract for only three years, but Aldermen Hastey, Slay, Lietchen and Collins, all lined up against the Mayor, have been advocating a 10-year renewal.

Another Contract Soon to Expire.
More important is the 10-year contract expiring next year under which the Union Electric provides electricity for lighting streets and public buildings. Since Mayor Dickmann has conditionally accepted the idea of a municipal gas plant, there are some of his aldermanic opponents who fear that he may eventually come out for construction of a city plant to supply all the municipal requirements for electricity.

Friends of former City Chairman Hastey have been his outer. In part, at least, to a speech in which he stepped on the toes of the public utilities. It is reported that at a Jefferson day banquet early this year he warned the utilities not to try to interfere with Mayor Dickmann's policies. Some of the committee have said that Hannegan's troubles began with the banquet speech.

Frank J. Boehm, executive vice-president of Union Electric, said today that he Igoe firm was not to be general counsel for Union Electric, but had been employed for trial work. He said the company would not have a general counsel for the present.

DIRECTED VERDICT FREES LAWYER ON TRIAL WITH LASKA

Judge Orders Acquittal of
J. C. Mathers, One of
Two Accused of Taking Urschel Ransom.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., June 14. Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaughn ordered a directed verdict of acquittal today for James C. Mathers, Oklahoma City attorney charged with receiving kidnapping ransom money as a fee.

The ruling came shortly after Mathers and his co-defendant, Ben B. Laska, Denver attorney, had rested their cases after brief testimony denying their guilt. The Judge overruled Laska's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Laska was charged by the Government with receiving $10,000 and Mathers $10,000 of the $200,000 ransom paid for the release of Charles F. Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma oil man, in 1933. Laska defended Albert Bates and Mathers was attorney for Harvey Bailey. Both Bates and Bailey are serving life terms in Alcatraz Prison.

In overruling Laska's motion, Judge Vaughn held there was sufficient evidence to permit the case to go to the jury. The motions were made at the conclusion of rebuttal testimony.

Final Arguments Start.
Final arguments began as Laska's motion was overruled. Judge Vaughn said attorneys for each side would be allowed one and one-half hours. Frank M. Dudley, Assistant City Attorney, opened the arguments.

Laska said vehemently from the witness stand he had received no part of the ransom money. Mathers testified Laska never had given him any money. The Government charged through Edward Feldman, Bates' attorney, that Laska gave Mathers $10,000 in an Oklahoma City hotel bathroom.

In a voice husky with emotion and with tears in his eyes, Mathers said he and Laska had gone into the bathroom from Dr. and I wanted him to have a drink."

"No, no, absolutely not," was Laska's answer to questions yesterday concerning alleged threats to Feldman and his mother, Mrs. Clara Feldman, wife of Bates.

Laska made some emphatic answers to questions by his attorney, David Tant, concerning testimony by Feldman and his mother that Laska directed concealment of Bates' $75,000 share in the Urschel ransom and that he accepted $10,000 in "hot ransom cash" to defend Bates.

Both Feldman and his mother had testified that Laska told them to "follow my instructions in disposing of the money or I'll have your throat slit."

After completing direct testimony, Laska underwent a withering cross-examination by Assistant United States Attorney Dudley.

The examination by Dudley was marked by frequent clashes between the witness and the young prosecutor, who declared frequently: "I'm asking these questions. All I want from you is the answers. I don't need any help."

Going frequently from the witness chair to the Government counsel table for glasses of water, Laska, wearing a red and silver-striped tie and a brilliant red pocket handkerchief, repeatedly aroused the ire of Judge Vaughn, who admonished him to "conduct yourself properly."

By Hastey and Aldermen Slay and Lietchen, struck it out. Measures of great importance to Union Electric are to come up soon in the Board of Aldermen. One is a pending bill to renew a contract for electricity for traffic signals and parking meters. It is proposed to extend this contract for only three years, but Aldermen Hastey, Slay, Lietchen and Collins, all lined up against the Mayor, have been advocating a 10-year renewal.

Some of the committee have said that Hannegan's troubles began with the banquet speech.

Frank J. Boehm, executive vice-president of Union Electric, said today that he Igoe firm was not to be general counsel for Union Electric, but had been employed for trial work. He said the company would not have a general counsel for the present.

DOCTOR OPERATES ON CHOKING GIRL WITH RAZOR BLADE

Sioux Falls (S. D.) Physician
Meets Emergency by Making Incisions in Windpipe.

By the Associated Press.

SIoux FALLS, S. D., June 14.—An emergency operation was performed with a razor blade from a cigar clipper on Patricia Lee Fleegle, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Fleegle, as she was choking.

Patricia was unconscious when Dr. Gregory I. W. Cottam reached her. The cigar clipper blade was the only instrument available. Dr. Cottam quickly made incisions in Patricia's windpipe, to permit her to breathe, and then took her to a hospital.

Patricia was recovering today, hospital attaches said.

TROOPS SENT AFTER STRIKE CLASH AT FREEPORT, ILL.

Four Companies of Militia Ordered Out; Three Pickets Injured
Fighting Sheriff's Forces.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14.—Adjutant-General Carlos Black at noon today ordered four companies of the Illinois National Guard to Freeport to quell disturbances resulting from a strike at the plant of the Stover Manufacturing Co.

FREEPORT, Ill., June 14.—Three pickets were injured today when Sheriff Lee Aund of Stephenson County and 25 deputies undertook to help officers of the Stover Manufacturing Co. closed a month ago by a strike for union recognition, ship out finished products.

Sheriff Aund and the deputies, among whom were foremen sworn in for the occasion, fired tear gas projectiles when they said they were menaced by 150 picketing members of the striking mechanics and moulders' union. Charles Reedy was treated at a hospital for a wound in the face, and Jack Groves and O. B. Brunner were struck by tear gas projectiles.

UNION MILK WAGON DRIVERS AUTHORIZE CALLING STRIKE

Officers Given Power to Act if Wage Negotiations Fail.

Union milk wagon drivers, meeting last night, voted strike authority to their officers in the event of the failure of negotiations for a new working contract calling for a 10 per cent wage increase.

The former contract expired May 31, and wage committees have been negotiating a new agreement. The drivers, in addition to their wage demand, asked for an increase in vacation time from 10 days to two weeks, with pay.

Wage scales, which employers have requested be continued for another year, are: For retail routes, $38.88 a week, plus commission; wholesale routes, $38.80 a week and commission; substitute drivers, $41.40 a week; route foremen, $46.92 a week.

KANKAKEE, Ill., June 14.—Nearly 1000 visitors were here as the Illinois Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars opened its annual encampment with James E. Van Zandt, national commander, heading the speakers' list. A military ball was held last night, followed by a bugle and drum corps contest this afternoon and a military parade at night. The encampment will end Saturday. F. Yetter of Chicago, present senior vice-commander, has been mentioned as a candidate for department commander.

HANNIBAL, Mo., June 14.—Welcome addresses and a memorial service began the fifteenth State encampment yesterday of the Missouri Department of Veterans of Foreign Wars and its auxiliary.

Several hundred members attended the memorial service conducted by the department chaplain, B. H. Overman of Kansas City. Commander John C. Mulvihill, Kansas City, presided over V. F. Byars, Columbia, Judge Advocate, are leading candidates for commander. Election will be held Saturday.

SENTENCES OF FACTOR KIDNAPERS UPHELD

Illinois Supreme Court Says Guilt of Three Is "Overwhelmingly Established."

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14.—The Illinois Supreme Court today upheld the 99-year prison sentences now being served by Roger Touhy, Peter Stevens and Albert Kator, for the kidnaping at Chicago of John Factor.

In one of 49 opinions handed down today, the Supreme Court said of the trial of the Touhy gangsters:

"The evidence so overwhelmingly establishes the guilt of the defendants that the jury could not reasonably have arrived at any other verdict."

Factor, who was wanted in England in connection with his activities as a speculator, was kidnaped from a Morton Grove roadhouse nearly two years ago and was released a week later. Reports were that $50,000 ransom was paid.

The Supreme Court opinion, by Justice Jones, held that no errors were committed during the trial and that it was unnecessary for a defendant to be actually present at the kidnaping if he was otherwise a party to the crime.

TREES TRANSPLANTED TO PLAZA SURVIVING

Foliage Will Be Light for Three Years Until Roots
Take Firm Hold.

All of the 216 American elm and sweet gum trees which were transplanted early this year to Memorial Plaza and the City Hall grounds have survived, are covered with foliage and, apparently, are doing nicely.

At the City Forester's office today it was said the trees are all now considered permanent adjuncts to the Plaza. Wire guys to hold them in place will be left on another year until the roots take a firm hold. The foliage will be light for about three years until the roots get sufficient vitality.

Heavy rains in April and May helped the trees along considerably but in hot dry weather they will be watered twice a day and the leaves will be sprayed. The trees were transplanted from Christy, Forest and Francis parks at a total cost of $15,300, including labor which was paid for by the FERA.

'SPOT' REAGAN INDICTED FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

Fugitive, Caught After Two-Year Search, Accused of Killing Salesman in 1933.

An indictment charging first degree murder was voted by the grand jury yesterday against John J. (Spot) Reagan, former professional bondsman, for the murder of Clifford Appler, 34-year-old salesman, on May 11, 1933.

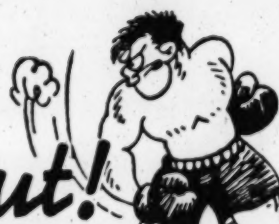

Reagan, a fugitive since the shooting, was arrested last week in Kansas City, Mo., by detectives who had been assigned to the case for more than two years. Since then he has been held in City Jail without bond on a temporary warrant issued by the Circuit Attorney. No bond is possible on the first degree murder charge.

Reagan was out on bond on an assault charge at the time of the shooting. Appler, who lived at 4618 Newberry terrace, was shot when playing ball with some boys in a back yard near Reagan's apartment at 4351 Maryland avenue. The ball rolled into Reagan's yard. Appler went into the yard and got the ball. Reagan became incensed and ordered Appler out, but followed and shot Appler, after hitting him on the head with the pistol. Appler died two days later.

LIEUT. SEBASTIAN ADMITS 1931 MARRIAGE TO DANCER

Court Martial Adjourns Without Finding, Referring Decision to Division Commander.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 14.—Lieut. Henry A. Sebastian, former West Point football star, admitted through his counsel to a court martial yesterday that he had married a revue dancer while still a cadet, but pleaded he believed the ceremony illegal and void because he had used a false name.

The court adjourned without a finding, referring the decision to Gen. Lucius T. Holbrook, commander of the First Division. Reduction in promotion files or dismissal from the army are possible punishments.

The army officer was ordered before the court martial at Fort Jay after his wife, the former Harriet Hagman, sued him for separation, charging he beat her after an Army day party at Governors Island. She disclosed they had been married in a ceremony at Brooklyn in 1931. On his graduation in 1934 they were remarried in a church ceremony at Newburgh, N. Y., his mother a witness. West Point cadets are forbidden to marry and on leaving West Point are required to sign certificates they are not married. Sebastian's counsel admitted the youth had signed the certificate, but contended the Government had to prove he had done so with intent willfully to deceive.

WOMAN DIES TWO DAYS AFTER FIANCE SUCCEUMBS

Miss Ethel Vogel and R. L. Daly Had Been Friends 34 Years.

Funeral services for Miss Ethel Vogel, who died yesterday at her home, 5087 Kensington avenue, after a long illness, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Harrigan & Sheahan mortuary, 4415 Washington boulevard, with burial in Memorial Park Cemetery.

Miss Vogel, 52 years old, died less than 48 hours after her fiancé, Richard Lawrence Daly, former auditor for the Board of Education, who died suddenly Tuesday night in the board's office building, 911 Locust street.

Their friendship began about 34 years ago and was interrupted only during the years Mr. Daly served in the World War. Twelve years ago they announced their engagement to friends and relatives. Why they were never married is not known by relatives.

Because of her illness, Miss Vogel did not learn of Mr. Daly's death. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Mary J. Vogel, and a brother, Carl J. Vogel.

Text of Official Report On Investigation of the TWA Air Liner Crash at Macon, Mo.

Secretary of Commerce Roper's Statement Is Supplemented With Memorandum by Vidal,
His Aviation Assistant.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The text of Secretary of Commerce Roper's statement today on the crash of the Transcontinental & Western Air liner Sky Chief follows:

"The Bureau of Air Commerce, under my direction, has just completed an investigation of the crash of the Transcontinental & Western Air Inc. Co. plane Sky Chief near Atlanta, Mo., on May 6, 1935, in which the late Senator cutting of New Mexico and four other persons were killed and eight persons seriously injured.

"The inquiry has been conducted with all possible expedition and thoroughness. Within a short time after the accident happened, five Department of Commerce air line inspectors from different parts of the middlewest were on their way to the scene of the crash. Upon arrival, they promptly inaugurated a preliminary investigation. An inquiry was also started immediately by the accident board of the bureau and two members of the board, Messrs. Dennis Mulligan, chief of the enforcement section, and R. W. Schroeder, chief of the air line inspection service, went to the scene of the accident and later held public hearings in Kansas City and Macon, Mo. A total of 907 pages of testimony was taken at these hearings. Charts, maps, logs, photographs and other exhibits germane to the inquiry also were obtained and later brought to Washington where, immediately upon closing of the public hearings, meetings of the entire accident board were held. Following completion of the report by the board, the report and all of the testimony and exhibits were examined and reviewed thoroughly by Eugene L. Vidal, director of the bureau, and J. Carroll Cone, assistant director in charge of air regulation, and a summary of the investigation, including testimony, exhibits and comments, made to me. I have carefully studied the facts in the case as reflected by this material and this report is the result of my conclusions based on that study.

Weather Conditions Bad.

"Attached is a complete copy of the summary of the board's findings and comment on the accident by Director Vidal. The full text of the testimony taken by the accident board and all of the exhibits obtained by the members in their investigation are on file in public record form at the Air Commerce Bureau in the Department of Commerce.

"I am convinced that the accident was due chiefly to bad weather conditions. The two pilots, Bolton and Gresson, made every possible effort to land their passengers safely, but were unable to do so because of the prevailing fog and darkness. Contributory causes undoubtedly were inaccurate weather forecasts from both the United States Weather Bureau and the company meteorologist, given the Sky Chief crew at Albuquerque about 9 p. m.

on May 5; improper clearance by T. W. A. ground personnel of the plane from Albuquerque; improper control of the plane by the same personnel after the departure from Albuquerque; error on the part of the pilot in proceeding after he was unable to effectively communicate with the ground, and failure of the T. W. A. ground personnel at Kansas City to expeditiously reschedule the plane to a field where a safe landing might be effected.

Regulations Violated.

"Violations by the Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., of five bureau regulations are indicated and such violations will be filed against the company. The regulations under which the alleged violations occurred were made effective as of Oct. 1, 1934. They were supplied the T. W. A. Co. in mimeographed form in November, 1934, and were accepted by the company and subsequently printed in its manual with the added comment on each page of the manual that the regulations were approved by the bureau. The violations which will be filed are as follows:

"1. Regulations require that when a first pilot has been absent from an airline division for more than six months, he shall obtain approval from the Bureau of Air Commerce before returning to duty.

"While Pilot Bolton had previously flown the Los Angeles-Kansas City division for an extended period, he had been regularly assigned for nearly a year prior to the accident to the Kansas City-Newark run and had not been approved for duty for scheduled operation on the Western division.

Fuel Less Than Required.

"2. Regulations require that airline first pilots shall be examined every three months by designated medical examiners to determine their fitness.

"Pilot Bolton did not take the quarterly medical examination during the month of February, 1935, as required by the regulations.

"3. The regulations require that where waivers of flight time limitations are allowed for continuous flight exceeding eight hours without an approved rest period, the co-pilot shall hold a scheduled air transport rating.

"Co-pilot Gresson did not hold a scheduled air transport rating.

"4. The regulations provide that air line craft shall carry sufficient fuel and oil to fly 45 minutes in addition to the time required for the flight to the next scheduled stop or refueling station. Such additional fuel and oil shall be above and beyond that required by abnormal wind and weather conditions.

"The tanks of the Sky Chief contained only a 27-minute reserve fuel supply when the crash occurred. When the fact was available at Kansas City that the ceiling was lower than the authorized minimum, which was while the plane was in the vicinity of Wichita, the Kansas City dispatcher should have grounded that ship at Wichita for fuel and further instructions. Instead, he allowed the plane to proceed into weather conditions which required a flight of a greater distance than permitted landing with the required 45-minute reserve fuel supply.

"5. The regulations permit intentional instrument flying over or through fog, clouds or overcast only under certain conditions, one of which is that two-way communication is maintained with ground stations.

"Official records show that the Sky Chief's radio transmitter was not functioning on night frequency when the plane cleared Albuquerque and that the official weather forecast indicated that the instrument flying would be required along the route. The pilot's log also shows a notation made by Co-Pilot Gresson, somewhere between Albuquerque and Kansas City, to the effect that the transmitter was out and the receiver was carrying very weak. Therefore, in view of the regulation requiring a two-way radio, the pilot should have landed at the nearest intermediate station, either Amarillo, Tex., or Wichita, Kan.

"The plane also was directed by the Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., dispatcher at Kansas City to attempt a landing there despite the fact that the ceiling had fallen to below 700 feet, the minimum for landing down through to Kansas City appearing in the company's approved operation manual. If the pilot had followed these instructions, it would have been a violation.

"Searching inquiry by the accident board, the director and myself indicate that the Department of Navigation aids and personnel in the area over which the plane was being flown were functioning properly at all times during the fatal flight.

"Not a Policing Body."

"In this connection it should be kept in mind that the department is charged with aiding aviation by both establishing aids to air navigation and developing safer and improved methods of operation and drafting regulations helpful to the public and the industry, but that it is not a policing body. It does not have an inspection force of sufficient size to apprehend violations the moment they occur or to be able to prevent all violations. It exercises constant vigilance to set up regulations which will improve air line operations and, with the co-operation of operating companies and private flyers, enforces them stringently. Bureau regulations, particularly covering safety in flying, are stricter today than they ever have been before in history.

"Discussion of two regulations which were changed by the department, effective Oct. 1, 1934, in regard to reserve fuel supplies to be carried by planes and maximum hours to be flown by pilots which has arisen in connection with this accident, indicates a misunderstanding of the facts.

"The new regulation requiring pilots to carry in addition to the normal reserve, a sufficient fuel and oil supply to enable them to fly for 45 minutes after landing at their terminals or refueling points marked a distinct advance in behalf of safer flying. The former regulation provided that a pilot should carry a 35 per cent fuel reserve. Under this old rule, a pilot, when flying against a head wind, or when circling in storms, could exhaust his reserve fuel supply and still be complying with bureau regulations. Under the new rule, such a situation is impossible. This new regulation undoubtedly has made flying safer.

Flying Time Reduced.

"The regulations also were changed on Oct. 1, 1934, so as to greatly reduce both the maximum annual flying time of first pilots and the monthly flying time of co-pilots. Formerly, first pilots were permitted to fly 1320 hours annually. Under the regulations of Oct. 1, 1934, the annual maximum flying time of first pilots was reduced more than 25 per cent, or from 1320 to 1000 hours. The monthly flying time of co-pilots, which formerly was without limit, was reduced to 100 hours.

"The custom of waiving, in certain cases, the regulation providing a maximum daily flying time of eight hours for first pilots also has caused discussion. Waiver of this regulation has been granted by the bureau since 1930, to meet exceptional conditions. Usually waivers were granted to assist companies to complete runs of slightly more than eight hours duration where the changing of pilots near the end of a run would work an unnecessary hardship and expense without adding to the safety of the operation.

"The Sky Chief accident occurred on a run on which the operating company had been granted a waiver. This waiver was granted at the request of both T. W. A. pilots and officials because the Los Angeles-Kansas City eastbound run has a scheduled flying time of eight hours and 15 minutes. Thus the waiver permitted the company to work its first pilot a short time in excess of the regular eight-hour day and thus enabled them to complete the run with one first pilot. The custom of this company, it should be noted, was not to work its pilots coming under the waiver rule more than 100 hours in any single month.

"Despite the fact that this run was being operated under a waiver, nothing has been developed in connection with the accident to indicate that either First Pilot Bolton or Co-Pilot Gresson was suffering from fatigue which in any way contributed to the accident.

Bolton's Reputation High.

"In fairness to the company, it also should be stated that Pilot Bolton had the reputation of being a high-class pilot and that he had an extended rest period before taking out the Sky Chief on its ill-fated flight. He had gone to the coast as pilot of a chartered plane, and his selection for this important assignment is indicative of the confidence placed in him by his company. During the three months prior to the accident he had flown an average of only 83 hours monthly. He had not been on any sort of flight duty during the five days immediately preceding his shipping as pilot of the Sky Chief.

"The unusual aid given pilots on all TWA planes in the form of automatic pilots also should be mentioned. All TWA planes are equipped with automatic pilots, and the Sky Chief, in common with the rest, had one of them.

"Thus it was possible for the Sky Chief pilots, not only to relieve each other at the controls for rest periods, but also to control the plane safely by the automatic pilot.

"The point has been made that the Sky Chief did not carry a hostess and that at times the co-pilot may have been called upon to perform duties ordinarily assigned to a hostess. This is an accurate statement regarding the size of the crew personnel. TWA planes do not carry hostesses.

Waiver of Rule Rescinded.

"Until this accident happened, no suggestion ever had been made, either by companies or pilots, that the provision for waiving the eight-hour rule might be of questionable merit. However, the bureau is desirous at all times of exercising every safeguard in flying and as a precautionary step, the rule permitting the waiver of the eight-hour regulation has been temporarily rescinded and a thorough inquiry of its effect on pilots is being made.

"Careful study of conditions surrounding the accident indicates the advisability of the bureau continuing to strengthen its regulations regarding the employment of thoroughly qualified dispatchers by companies. This arm of the Air Service received special attention in the revision of regulations on Oct.

1, 1934, when, for the first time in the history of the bureau, approval of dispatchers by the bureau was made obligatory. The bureau now is convinced that dispatchers should be licensed, that their responsibilities should be made exact and that only men of the highest type should be approved.

Advisability of Further Study.

"The accident suggests the advisability of further study of the reserve fuel problem and this is being made by the department. The existing rule which requires a pilot to carry sufficient fuel for 45 minutes flying after landing at a terminal or refueling point will be retained as a minimum. Consideration also will be given to the adoption of a proportionate fuel reserve regulation to apply to long distance flights.

"It is deplorable that this accident should have happened when both the plane and the field over which it was flying were not fitted with equipment now being developed under the supervision of the bureau that it is believed will lend material aid to flying safety. Rapid progress is being made in the perfection of equipment for the transmission of radio communication and radio direction signals designed to greatly improve air line operations. Radio approach facilities also are making marked advances and it is believed by aviation authorities that if the Sky Chief and landing fields in and near Kansas City had been fitted with recently perfected equipment for such operations, the plane might have been brought down in safety.

"The Department of Commerce is doing its utmost to make flying safer. It is the desire of the department not only to meet every legal requirement imposed upon it, but also to exercise every technical and practicable approach to safeguard human life."

Memorandum by Vidal.

A memorandum attached to the report by Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, gave an outline of the department's plans for improving air safety. He said:

"1. The installation of instrument (blind) approach facilities, after years of development and testing by the Department of Commerce, is being expedited at major air terminals and air line planes will be required to be equipped with radio compasses or the equivalent as soon as possible.

"The necessary radio approach equipment has been on order since November, 1934. It is hoped that the requests for funds submitted months ago for clearing approaches to terminals will be granted. This will result in greater safety in landing during bad weather.

"2. The Department of Commerce will expedite the contemplated licensing of air line dispatchers to place the recently adopted and present system of approval, and will designate and define the duties and responsibilities of such dispatchers.

"3. The terminal traffic control studies of the Department of Commerce and the air lines which have been continuing for a number of months, when completed and become operative, will add to the safeguards in situations such as this.

"4. A clear and complete interpretation of the existing fuel reserve regulations will be conveyed to all air line personnel, and the Department of Commerce will consider the adoption of a proportionate fuel reserve regulation to apply to long-distance flights. In any event, the existing 45 minute reserve fuel rule shall be retained as a minimum.

"5. The policy permitting the issuance of a waiver of the eight-hour per day flight time limitation for pilots, which has been in effect for a period of years, has been rescinded, and further study will be devoted to this regulation with particular reference to its application to long-distance flying and hours of duty.

Radio Equipment Installed.

"6. The simultaneous transmission of radio communication and radio direction signals, similar to that provided and being tested by the Department of Commerce experimental station at Pittsburgh, Pa., is being installed at terminal airports.

"7. The Department of Commerce will provide for the inspection of aircraft radio installation and maintenance by specially qualified inspectors, in addition to its present staff of air line and air line maintenance inspectors.

"8. The Department of Commerce will again request funds for larger aircraft development work. The new development section of the bureau has made most gratifying progress during the past year in developing safer and easier controlled small planes. Certain principles are adaptable to the larger air line aircraft for increasing their safety in maneuvering and landing, but the present allotment is insufficient to experiment with larger planes.

"9. Naturally, the existence of more airports is of importance to any pilot in distress. While hundreds of airports were constructed last year with public works funds, requests for the construction of many more fields have been made by the Department of Commerce.

"10. Even though an improved airways system might not have prevented the accident, it should be mentioned at this time that several millions of dollars allotted the Department of Commerce by the Public Works Administration were spent last year in improving or extending the airways system, and it is hoped that the requests of the bureau of last winter for additional emergency funds for further airways improvements will be granted."

At the request of Richard F. Surkamp, inspector in the State Department of Liquor Control, Chief of Police McCarthy today ordered police captains to enforce the new State liquor laws rigidly beginning next Thursday.

All liquor establishments must close at midnight Saturday and remain closed until 6 a. m. Monday. On other nights the closing hour is 1:30 a. m., with opening before 6 a. m. prohibited.

SHRINERS LEAVE WASHINGTON

Shriners were homeward bound today after a night of parading, pageantry, dancing and fireworks as the climax of their sixty-first annual conclave.

President Roosevelt was unable to witness the four-hour parade which moved past the White House until midnight. Mrs. Roosevelt explained that the President had a cold. Many marchers bowed low, however, in an Arabic salami before the "Pavilion of Omar" in which the President had been expected to review the spectacle.

ROOSEVELT REQUESTS DELAY IN COAL STRIKE

Extension of Agreements to July 1 Pending Passage of Guffey Bill Predicted.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14. — President Roosevelt asked today for postponement of the soft coal strike set for next Monday, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, predicted the request would be granted.

Roosevelt requested an extension of the present wage and hour agreement until July 1, Lewis said, to permit Congress to enact the Guffey coal stabilization bill. Without the price control provision of the Guffey bill many operators contended the industry could not afford to make new wage and hour commitments.

Lewis had ordered the strike for Monday unless new contracts were signed before then. Union leaders had said a strike would involve 450,000 miners.

Roosevelt's recommendations will be submitted to the Appalachian Joint Wage Conference here tomorrow. Duncan Kennedy, chairman of the conference and a representative of the operators, predicted with Lewis that the President's request would be granted.

"The President suggested—after canvassing the legislative situation that in the public interest he would request the operators and miners to extend the status quo of the wage agreements in the industry until July 1 and save the country the expense and inconvenience of a suspension of work," Lewis said.

"D. C. Kennedy and I agreed with the President that we would recommend to our respective interests the entire acceptance of the President's suggestions."

Lewis said he felt the Guffey bill had "ample support" in both houses of Congress to insure enactment.

Both Senator Guffey (Dem.), Pennsylvania, and Representative Snyder (Dem.), Pennsylvania, who were called to the White House with Lewis and Kennedy, said they thought chances for passage of the bill were excellent.

CONDEMNED MAN CUTS THROAT BUT IS EXECUTED HOUR LATER

Michigan City (Ind.) Prisoner Walks to Electric Chair After 28 Stitches Are Taken.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 14. —Olivette Griggs, 32-year-old Gary (Ind.) Negro, sentenced for the murder of a poolroom operator, died in the electric chair at the State prison early today, 50 minutes after he had slashed his throat with a razor blade in a suicide attempt in the death cell.

Prison officials said Griggs had concealed a razor blade in his mouth, hiding it during three changes of clothing yesterday.

Shortly after 11 o'clock last night, they said, he was found with a deep cut in his throat. Dr. Patrick Weeks, prison physician, summoned before the condemned man lost much blood, took 28 stitches to close the prisoner's windpipe.

Griggs revived sufficiently to walk to the execution chamber.

ILLINOIS HOUSE PASSES BILL FOR HANDBOOKS IN CHICAGO

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14. —The Illinois House passed a bill yesterday for the licensing of Chicago handbooks.

Spokesmen for Mayor Edward J. Kelly contended that gambling could be controlled only by licensing bookmakers. The vote was 89 to 53 in sending the bill to the Senate.

"A corrupt Tammany machine from Chicago wants this bill," said Clinton Searle, Dock Island, Republican.

The Chicago Mayor and a group of his associates sat with Speaker John P. Devine during the debate. Under the bill, introduced by John M. Bolton, Chicago, Democrat, the City Council would fix license fees and make regulations for the conduct of the establishments at which bets are made on horse races. The bill applies only to Chicago, with revenues to be divided between the city and the schools.

National Science Medal Awarded.

PASADENA, Cal., June 13.—Dr. Edwin P. Hubble, foremost authority on nebulae at the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory, today became the first American scientist to win the Barnard gold medal of the National Academy of Sciences. F. A. P. Barnard, once president of Columbia University, who died in 1891, provided for the medal in his will. It was awarded to Dr. Hubble "in recognition of his important studies of nebulae, or star clusters, which provide the greatest contribution that has been made in recent years to our observational knowledge of the large-scale behavior of the universe."

Bridge Injunction Dissolved.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., June 14.—A temporary injunction preventing the construction of a new bridge over the Missouri River at Atchison by the Kansas and Missouri Highway Commissions was dissolved today by Federal Judge John C. Pollock. In denying the injunction Judge Pollock said that the toll bridge company which sought to block construction of the State-financed bridge did not show it had a franchise for the exclusive right to build a bridge there.

JURY OUT, MAN ADMITS HAVING STEPSON KILLED

Apparently Penalty Is Only Point to Decide After Trial of Rufus Edwards.

WEST PLAINS, Mo., June 14.—The jury hearing the case of Rufus E. Edwards, charged with first degree murder as the plotter of the murder last July of his stepson, Oscar Bushart, retired late last night without reaching a verdict.

Receiving the case about 9 o'clock, little more than 24 hours after selection of a jury in the case began, the jury was reported to be deadlocked over the death penalty demanded by the State.

The defense pleaded for life imprisonment after Edwards, the only defense witness, virtually entered a plea of guilty while on the witness stand. His attorneys, reportedly, had urged him before the trial opened to plead guilty.

Two other men, Ike Dawson and Joe (Lucky) Braden, pleaded guilty and both in their confessions implicated Edwards, formerly a Thayer (Mo.) real estate man. Dawson is under life sentence. Braden has not been sentenced.

Edwards, on the witness stand admitted the truth of his signed confession which had been read to the jury earlier and in which he told of plotting the murder. Edwards countered with testimony that his stepson was a financial burden and that he feared Bushart, his (Edwards') wife, and daughter, Mrs. Claudia Ross, were plotting to take his own life.

"I believe I'd be safe in saying that he (Bushart) never earned $50 in his life," he told the jury.

The alleged attempt on his life occurred one morning, he said, when he came to the breakfast table where everyone's coffee already had been poured. He said he reached over and exchanged his cup with that of his stepson. But before he could drink the coffee, he said, young Bushart's sister, Mrs. Ross, took her brother's cup and said, "Don't drink that; I'll get you another!"

Mrs. Ross denied the story in rebuttal testimony.

Prior to Edwards' testimony his wife took the stand. Her testimony further damaged her husband's defense.

ROAD BUILDERS OBJECT TO RELIEF WORK RULE

NORMANDIE'S BIGNESS APPEALS TO FRENCH

Limitation of $1400 a Man Per Year for Labor Will Exclude Heavy Paving, They Say.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Road builders predict there will be very little paving of primary highways this summer under the Government's work-relief program.

They say the limitation of expenditures on all highway projects to $1400 a man per year for labor, materials and incidentals, precludes the construction of heavy traffic pavements and will result in the utilization of the funds for grading and drainage only. This means, they assert, that the durable goods industries will not receive the benefits which accrue from a normal highway program.

Officers of the American Road Builders' Association say there are many localities where the grading and drainage of roads come within the category of useful work but that the necessity for grading is not as great as the demand for construction of heavy traffic highways in the vicinity of the larger industrial centers where the greater number of unemployed exists.

The Government placed the expenditure-per-man limitation on the first allotment of $200,000,000 for highway work under the new relief program for the purpose of providing direct labor for a larger number of the jobless.

"To arbitrarily set a figure of $1400 may put those on the relief rolls to work but it will be to the economic disadvantage of the highway industry and will decrease the permanent value that could be obtained from these expenditures," says a report by the road builders' organization.

The Bureau of Public Roads suggests that "due to the high percentage of direct labor requirements, it would seem advisable to use work-relief funds for first stage construction, to be followed by surfacing as regular Federal aid projects."

Some $125,000,000 in regular Federal aid funds will be available July 1, the use of these funds being contingent upon the various states providing sums to match them. Most of the states, it is said, will be able to go ahead with their regular building programs.

President Roosevelt also has allotted $200,000,000 for grade crossing elimination and protection to be spent under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Public Roads and the state highway departments. Grade crossing projects likewise will be measured for approval on a basis of $1400 expenditure per man per year, or on a basis of 40 per cent of the total cost of labor directly employed on the project. Take Ship to Heart Despite Usual Aversion to All Physical Greatness.

PARIS, June 14.—The most amazing thing about France's new trans-Atlantic liner, the Normandie, is not its size, nor its record breaking speed, nor the beauty of modernistic decorations, but the fact that 40,000,000 Frenchmen, despite their innate love of all things that are small and their chronic aversion to all things that are large, are thrilled by this superliner because it is "the biggest and the best."

Ever since the war, in particular, the French have enjoyed nothing better than to tell stories at the expense of the American fondness for whatever was the biggest on earth. Now by some whimsy, the traditional distinction between the French and American attitudes is momentarily reversed. When this writer wandered through the Normandie's salons and companionways French voices could be heard exclaiming proudly over the colossal dimensions of the liner. Equal delight, however, was expressed over the ship's remarkable internal beauty, and the Paris press took pains to point out that the French people would never have taken the Normandie to their hearts had she not been the world's most beautiful liner as well as the world's largest.

Still it seems that it is the Normandie's stupendousness which has impressed the nation most and promises to become the symbol of revised faith in France's mechanical genius. In decoration, in design, comfort and luxury, the Normandie is completely French. In her size she is the exact contrary of the normal French action and aspiration, yet for that the French love her most of all.

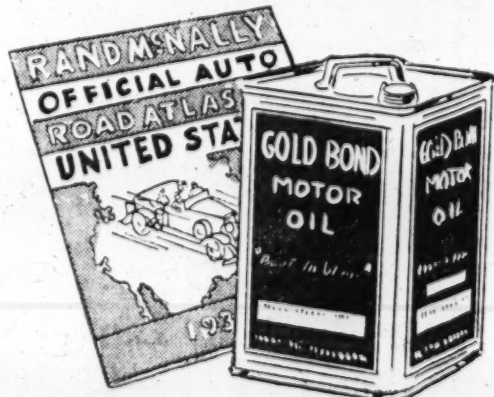

Perhaps the Normandie's speed record is not so important in the long run as the fact that she appears to mark a definite step in the modernization of the French people. For that some will cheer but others will sigh.

construction and grade crossing elimination will require that 90 per cent of the persons employed on any project shall be obtained from relief rolls.

Soviets Abandoning Their Revolutionary Extremes

Liberal Education, the Family and Cultural Pursuits Are Encouraged—Less Stress Laid on Propaganda.

(Copyright, 1935.)
MOSCOW, June 14.—The Soviets are moving away from some of the early extremes of the revolution at an increasing tempo. Since the beginning of May there have been Josef Stalin's speech wherein men were described as more important than machines; editorials in the Soviet press on the sacredness of motherhood and the duty of Soviet youth to honor their fathers and mothers; a decree by which parents were made responsible for misdeeds of their children and finally the presentation by the Theater of Revolution, of the Shakespeare "Romeo and Juliet" with the object of introducing Soviet children to a case of "true love."

Reaction against the early extremes may be dated back at least to 1931. Although there were some signs a year or so earlier of a shift, the so-called six-point speech Stalin made in June, 1931, may be taken as a turning point. Stalin at that time established for the U. S. S. R.
the time-honored principle of differentiation wages—the principle, that for the time being at least,
Soviet citizens should be paid in accordance with their ability and effort—and he insisted that the "technical intelligentsia" of the old system should be treated with consideration in building a new industrial society.

Not long afterward the committee form of management in industry, which had broken down, was replaced by one closer to the American plan. In each plant the management was centralized in the hands of one man. Meanwhile, changes were occurring in other fields. In the fall of 1932 there appeared the first series of decrees which worked a veritable counter revolution in the educational structure.

Shifting Away From Propaganda.
Throughout the system there was a shift away from propaganda and back to the fundamentals of education. In primary schools, subjects such as history and geography, which had been lost in the maze of "projects" and the like were restored to their erstwhile status. The so-called "brigade system" under which the bright pupil answered all of the questions, leaving his duller classmates with little or nothing to do, was abolished. Standard textbooks which had been replaced by frequently changing pamphlets came back. The pupils who had been charged for the most part with the control of discipline had made a mess of things. Thus, teachers were restored to their former positions as disciplinarians.

Today, the Soviet dress goods designs are conventional for the most part, and the styles the women wear trickle in from Paris and New York with modifications in the direction of simplicity.

The classics, including those of nineteenth century Russia, were brought back into the curriculum.
Previously, with certain exceptions, they had been banished. The Counter revolution in institutions of higher learning began somewhat later than that in the lower schools.
It is now well under way.

With the glorification of everything having to do with machines, advanced students were required to become absorbed themselves in the pure and applied sciences with the exclusion of almost everything else.
All of this is changing, with the result that soon the Soviet youth will leave the universities with something resembling a liberal education. Even traditional university degrees, including the doctorate of philosophy, have been restored.

Fairy Tales Return.

For a period of years children hardly out of their swaddling clothes were introduced to "story" books in which machines in text and pictures played a conspicuous role. From her desk in the Commissariat of Education Mme. Krupakaya, Lenin's widow, with others began a campaign for the reintro-duction of the fairy tale with the result that a year or so ago Russian translations of the traditional children's favorites, such as "Goldilocks," and "The Three Bears," began to reappear.

Educational authorities, meanwhile, arrived at the conclusion that toys which pleased the children were the best kind of toys.
They issued instructions that play-things need not necessarily have a propaganda purpose. In 1932, the textile industry brought forth a series of "Soviet" dress goods designs figured with tractors, Red soldiers and the like. There were attempts also to develop "proletarian" fashions for women's dress.
Both efforts ended in relative failure.

Today, the Soviet dress goods designs are conventional for the most part, and the styles the women wear
trickle in from Paris and New York
with modifications in the direction of simplicity.

STATE LIQUOR CHIEFS WANT FACA FUNCTIONS RETAINED

Ask President and Congress to Set Up Substitute for Defunct Organization.

By the Associated Press
CLEVELAND, O., June 14.—The National Conference of State Liquor Administrators voted unanimously yesterday to request President Roosevelt and Congress to set up an "appropriate tribunal" to carry on the functions of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, which was invalidated by the recent Supreme Court NRA ruling.

The administrators of 17 states, including Missouri and Illinois, adopted a resolution asking for perpetuation of the FACA functions, specifically concerning "advertising, labeling, standards of fill and movements of liquor in interstate commerce."
They also asked the liquor states to adopt meanwhile as an emergency measure the FACA regulations and to make them effective in intra-State liquor transactions, keeping them in force "until experience and intensive study shows in what respect they should be changed."

TESTIFIES TO FEE COLLECTION PLAN OF CREDIT BUREAU

Orville Livingston, Manager, Denies Collection Methods Constitute Practice of Law.

SOMETIMES PAID BY THREE SOURCES

This Was in Settling Accounts Against Bankrupt Estates — Witness Tells of Earnings.

The Adjustment Bureau of the St. Louis Association of Credit Men sometimes received fees from three sources in collecting accounts against bankrupt estates, Orville Livingston, manager, testified yesterday in a deposition taken by the Lawyers' Association of the Eighth Judicial District in its suit to restrain the bureau from alleged practice of law.

Collection methods of the bureau, however, did not constitute the practice of law, he insisted, explaining that all legal work was turned over to attorneys. He denied contentions of attorneys for the Committee on Unauthorized Practice of Law of the Lawyers' Association that the bureau solicited creditors' claims and sometimes represented adverse interests in bankruptcy matters.

The bureau, Livingston explained, received fees from claimants against bankrupt estates, who employed it voluntarily, and in addition got a statutory allowance in event he was elected trustee of the estate by the creditors. He received the statutory fee as trustee in such cases, he said, and turned it over to the bureau. A third source of fees to the bureau, he testified under questioning by Hyman G. Stein, representing the committee of the Lawyers' Association, was his practice as trustee of turning over to the bureau's collection department the receivable accounts of the bankrupt estate. Usually he did this if he had failed to make collections within 10 days, he said.

Sent Reports to Creditors. In an effort to establish that the bureau solicited claims, Stein inquired whether it had written to creditors of bankrupts, requesting their claims for collection. Livingston said he had sent reports on bankruptcy cases to creditors, but that his purpose was not to get their claims for the bureau.

"Isn't your purpose to get enough claims to assure your election as trustee?" Stein asked.

"Frankly, we'd be better off without the trusteeships," was the reply.

Last year, Livingston testified, his work as trustee in various bankruptcy cases brought only $1000 to $1500 to the bureau and his work as assignee for creditors "not much more."

The largest amounts accruing to the bureau in any one year as a result of his work as trustee and assignee were about $7000 and $10,000, respectively, he said under questioning.

"But that was eight or 10 years ago—it isn't a gold mine by any means," he added.

Income for Bureau. The largest annual income for the bureau from all fees was approximately $50,000 received about 10 years ago, he testified under questioning, volunteering information that "the income didn't run half that last year."

W. E. Finke, collection manager for the bureau, testified that about $600,000 in claims were referred to his department last year and about 50 per cent was collected.

In instances when a claimant asked that a suit be filed, the claim was turned over to a lawyer not connected with the bureau, Finke said. Most of the suits, he said, were filed by an attorney, formerly employed by the bureau, who still had desk space in its offices on the eighth floor of the Commercial Building.

The depositions were taken in the Telephone Building before Special Commissioner James F. Green.

LYNN MEAT CO. $50 FINE

IS QUASHED ON APPEAL

But Short-Weight Charge Against the South American Distributing Co. Is Upheld.

A $50 fine assessed in Police Court against Claude Shannon, clerk for the Lynn Meat Co., 800 North Sixth street, on a charge of selling short weight merchandise was dismissed by Judge Dickmann in Court of Criminal Correction yesterday where the case was heard on appeal. A fine of $100 against the South American Distributing Co., 604 South Seventh street, and Harry Natkins, manager, for a similar offense growing out of the same transaction, was sustained by Judge Dickmann.

An Inspector of the Department of Weights and Measures testified that four pounds of spaghetti which he purchased at the meat company were in original packages delivered by the distributing company. He said the order was about three ounces short in weight.

TOKWE RIVER HIPPO, IDOL OF TOURISTS, ORDERED KILLED

Fondness for His African Neighbors' Crops Causes Death Sentence on Animal.

By the Associated Press. FORT VICTORIA, Rhodesia, June 14.—The famous Tokwe River hippopotamus, idol of thousands of tourists, has been shot. The reason, it is said, was that he developed too big an appetite and had become a nuisance by raiding crops in the vicinity of the big pool on Maybrook Farm, favorite haunt of himself and his family.

The old fellow had been for many years past a familiar and favorite figure to residents and a source of entertainment. He had become relatively tame and seemed to take especial delight in posing for the camera.

E. G. Birch, Maybrook Farm owner, said the hippo often enjoyed specially prepared meals of pumpkins every day, and is quite indignant over the official killing of such an engaging character, whom he had adopted as a pet. In a protest against the official death sentence and execution, Birch says that on receiving a report that his charge had been shot by a Government official, he went to the scene and found hordes of natives devouring the huge carcass.

C. M. Turley, St. Louis, Elected. By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, June 14.—The National Building Owners' and Managers' Association closed its twenty-eighth annual convention yesterday with the election of Clarence M. Turley, Ambassador Building, St. Louis, as president, to succeed Frank S. Slosson of Chicago.

Some 450 delegates, the largest attendance in the association's history, selected Dallas, Tex., for the 1936 convention.

Youth Killed on Railroad Tracks. HARVEY, Ill., June 14.—The body of John Bartman, 18 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bartman, Litchfield, Ill., was found Monday night on the Illinois Central right-of-way near here. Apparently he had attempted to board a train and fallen beneath it. The youth was a class leader at Litchfield high school and a speaker at the commencement exercises held there this week. He had set out for Chicago, his parents said.

MILITARY CONTROL OF INDUSTRY STRICKEN FROM NYE WAR BILL

In Revised Form President Is Given Authority to Apply Only "Fitting" Regulations.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, June 14.—Heeding the advice of the War Department, a Senate Military Affairs Subcommittee struck out of the Nye anti-war profits bill today a proposal to conscript captains of industry in war time.

The bill, an outgrowth of investigations by the Munitions Committee headed by Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, had "proposed that industrialists making war materials should be subject to army discipline, including court martial.

If the Government and the plant managers disagreed the latter might be sent to the trenches. In its revised form, this "military control" of industry was wiped out. The President merely would be given authority to apply such regulations as he deemed fit. In event of a disagreement, industrial leaders might be removed into other Government service — not the trenches. The Government would have the power to commandeer an industrial plant.

The bill, drafted by the Munitions Committee in the hope of having it enacted at this session, has lain for several weeks in the subcommittee. Secretary of War Dern sent the committee a summary of War Department views, urging elimination of industrial conscription.

The NORGE BROILATOR...

The Broilator is smokeless and odorless... an exclusively Norge designed dome consumes all smoke and odors. Extremely fast cooking of meats on both sides at the same time results in a searing action which means that flavors are cooked in instead of out. This special Broilator innovation is a patented Norge feature.

THE NORGE DESIGNED CONCENTRATOR BURNER

Combines the best features of the modern round burners with those of the older and larger types. It covers a wide enough area to avoid any possibility of a hot spot, and as the jets are directed inward at an angle, the heat is concentrated on the bottom of the utensil, without any tendency to curl up the sides.

Due to the perfectly uniform distribution of gas to all openings, the burner has a very high efficiency and is, therefore, unusually economical of gas. You will be astonished at the speed with which it brings water to a boil, and delighted with the way you can turn it down without having a single jet go out. The burner is protected from spill-overs and its heat intensified by a reflecting bowl.

... Additional Features ...

1. Beauty and style, in keeping with the specifications furnished by more than 100,000 American Home Managers.

PACKERS SUE TO VOID PROCESSING TAX

Charge AAA Is Unconstitutional in Action in Philadelphia Federal Court.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—In an attack on the constitutionality of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, six packing companies charge in Federal Court suits that they have been forced to pay "ruinous amounts" in processing taxes.

Taxes totaling $1,100,297 have been levied against them since November, 1933, when the AAA became effective, the companies stated in the suits, filed yesterday.

"The tax levied on processors is arbitrary, capricious and contrary to the AAA itself," they state in their petitions, which ask for an order to prevent the Collector of Internal Revenue from collecting unpaid balances of $891,168, which they assert they are unable to pay.

Each company cited three reasons why they said the AAA is unconstitutional. They said the Government had no power to control production; that the processing tax was not in reality a tax as defined by the Constitution, and that even if it were valid, the Secretary of Agriculture should not be delegated arbitrary taxing power.

The firms bringing the suits are John J. Feltz & Co., F. G. Vogt & Son, A. C. Roberts, Chester Packing & Provision Co. of nearby Chester, Wailand Packing Co. of Phoenixville and the Jacob Ulmer Packing Co. of Pottsville.

UNION PROPOSES LEGISLATION FOR COTTON TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Efforts Made to Extend Administration Provisions of the Old NRA.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Seeking to extend the administrative provisions of the old NRA in the cotton textile industry, the executive committee of the United Textile Workers of America yesterday instructed Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the body, to offer Congress three proposals. The organization says it has 425,000 members.

The legislation, ought, similar to the Guffey coal bill, calls for organization of the industry into several divisions, each of which would be governed by its own administrative board. Representatives of both employers and workers would sit on these boards and determine wages, hours and work loads.

The bill also would establish labor relations boards for investigation of complaints and supervision of collective bargaining. A research and advisory division would be set up to make technical recommendations for the industry; certify plants on labor regulations and trade compliance, and attempt to perfect the industry's processes.

The restrictive powers of the legislation would be relegated chiefly to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the RFC, and manufacturers who refused to comply would be made subject to a Federal tax to be collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

DIAMOND TRUST REPRESENTATIVE

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.
SAM W. SWAAP.

MIDDLE CLASS BUYS MOST OF DIAMONDS

Industry Kept Alive by People Trying to Imitate Rich, Says Merchant.

The luxury trade of diamond selling isn't kept alive by the purchases of the rich and titled, but by the average people who imitate them, according to Sam W. Swaap, of Amsterdam, representative of the newly-formed Dutch diamond trust, who was in St. Louis yesterday. Swaap is making a short tour of America, conferring with diamond dealers and brokers on the prospects of selling more diamonds next year and maintaining the upturn in this industry which began last year, after the depression had knocked the supports from under it.

America and India, Swaap said, are the largest buyers of diamonds in the world, and for curious reasons. What keeps the trade up in America is that practically every young man, even if he makes only $20 a week, feels that he must, when he gets himself engaged, give the girl a diamond ring, even if it takes him several years of married life to pay for it. Also there is the craving of young women, especially in small towns, to buy their own diamonds.

"And once you have a small diamond," Swaap observed, "you'll soon want a larger one."

Stones Investments in India. In India, he said, it is the rise of a native middle class, which invests its earnings in gold, real estate, or jewelry, together with some of that land's bizarre customs, which make for large consumption of diamonds. There men wear diamond earrings and women diamonds in their noses, which all adds to the trade.

It isn't the rich, then, who keep up diamond consumption—not the residents of Park avenue or the maharajahs of India. And this, Swaap thinks, prevents what is often talked about in the industry, but which Swaap thinks will never come—saturation of the market.

Swaap is the head of the diamond cutting house of W. Swaap, founded by his father. Although he has seen and handled billions of dollars worth of the stones, he has never worn one. He is fully insured against robbery, but, he says, he is much more concerned about his safety when he's carrying a $10,000 bill than when he has diamonds at ten times the value on his person.

Carrying the diamonds, in their thin, flat wrappings of fine tissue paper, becomes somewhat of a habit and causes little worry. Large shipments in small cardboard boxes are sent casually through first-class mail.

Depression Hits Market. Before the stock market crash in 1929, America imported $50,000,000 worth of diamonds, Swaap said. A low of $9,000,000 was reached in 1932, but last year the imports totaled about $12,000,000. Americans, however, who used to buy the finest diamonds, now buy the inferior varieties, he said.

The trust he represents was formed this year with the Dutch Government, the City of Amsterdam, the banks, the diamond cutting companies, and the workers all contributing new capital. It was done, he said, to keep the industry alive in Holland, where diamond cutting is not the largest industry, but the one for which this small European country is most noted and in which it takes its greatest pride.

The Government, moreover, in helping to keep the industry up, gives to the trust the role which would ordinarily go to unemployed diamond cutters, to form the largest part of the salary which the cutters receive. Low wages in cutting factories on other countries practically forced all the Dutch firms to close.

DRIVERS' LICENSE BILL SIGNED

Measure Enables Missouri Municipalities to Pass Own Laws. JEFFERSON CITY, June 14.—Missouri municipalities will soon be legally authorized to pass their own drivers' license laws. Gov. Park's office announced he signed the measure which was substituted late in the recent session of the Legislature for the statewide drivers' license bill sponsored by the Automobile Club of Missouri.

Under the measure, municipalities may regulate their own ordinances, and charge up to 50 cents for a two-year license. The law becomes effective late in August.

REPUBLICAN SPEAKER SAYS DEMOCRATS HAVE FAILED

Grover W. Dalton Thinks People Are Dissatisfied With Administration.

People, regardless of their political affiliations, have become "dissatisfied with the Democratic national administration because it has failed to accomplish what it set out to do when it assumed office," according to Grover W. Dalton of Poplar Bluff, chairman of the Republican State Committee. Dalton was principal speaker at the regular June meeting of the Republican Woman's Club yesterday at Hotel Statler.

"There never was a time in the history of the country more vital and interesting to women," Dalton said. "The foundation of the philosophy of government is centered in the home. Extravagance in government is reflected in every home and under the present administration women all over the nation are faced with the problem of rising prices without additional income available to meet them."

The Republican State Committee chairman said "the hope of the Republican party lies in the organization of young voters," and party leaders have agreed this should start at once in every precinct, the smallest voting unit.

SENATOR SAYS NRA DECISION DOESN'T HAMPER GOVERNMENT

Wagner in Speech Asserts Court Taught Congress Valuable Lesson.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, June 14.—In a radio address last night Senator Wagner (Dem.), New York, said there was nothing in the Supreme Court NRA decision to prevent the Government from coping with modern national problems.

"We do not believe there is a single letter in the Schechter decision which makes it impossible for the Federal Government to cope in any way with economic problems that challenge the whole nation," Wagner said. "We find no evidence in the decision that our Constitution compels us to bow our heads before the dreadful consequences that inaction would bring."

He asserted that the court, in its criticism of the delegation of power to "a wide variety of private agencies unanswerable to the people," had taught Congress a lesson in good government.

"We are thankful for the services that have been performed by the court in ordering Congress to chart a clearer and more defined course as to what affects interstate commerce and what does not," the New Yorker continued. "We are prepared to make plans for changes in legislative detail and administrative organization that will conform to the Supreme Court's decision."

He defended enactment of the recovery law which set up the industrial codes recently killed by the court. He said that, in the face of results obtained under the act, it was "unthinkable we should return to the destructive planless-

DOCTORS OPPOSE STATE SICKNESS INSURANCE

House of Delegates Proposes Plan Extending Only to the Community.

By the Associated Press.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 13.—The American Medical Association yesterday voted out of office its speaker of the House of Delegates, Dr. F. C. Warnshuis, of San Francisco. Who has held the office since 1922 and secretary of the California Medical Association for the past year. Dr. Nathan B. Vanitenn was elected to succeed him. In this way the House of Delegates, governing body of American Medicine, reaffirmed its stand against all efforts to provide sickness insurance by the States or the Federal Government and censured the first of its component State organizations which has expressed favor of the idea.

The members of the House of Delegates also reaffirmed opposition to legislation of that type, particularly as embodied in the proposed social security bill proposed by President Roosevelt. "A single, universal or master plan cannot possibly be devised to meet all the varying conditions throughout the United States or even different sections of individual States," the delegates declared.

As a substitute they proposed the continuance and amplification of the community sickness insurance plan adapted to the needs of a local area by supervision of the county or local medical societies. "The profession needs and will always welcome the co-operation and advice of all elements affected in health problems, but just as the individual physician must constantly assume the tremendous responsibility of decisions that involve life and death with individual patients, so the profession as a whole must assume the leadership and responsibility in the organization of medical service in the community," they added.

Dr. James Tate Mason of Seattle, Wash., was named president-elect of the Association to take office at the 1936 convention which the delegates decided would be held in Kansas City, Mo.

WISCONSIN SENATE VOTES DOWN JOB RELIEF SCRP

Rejects Plan to Do $209,000,000 Worth of Work With $100,000,000 in Federal Funds.

By the Associated Press.
MADISON, Wis., June 14.—Wisconsin's plan to turn the $100,000,000 works relief grant of Federal money into a revolving fund of $209,000,000 by the use of State scrip, was killed by the State Senate last night.

The vote, 19 to 14, showed 13 Progressives and a lone Democrat for the bill, with 13 Democrats and six Republicans opposed.

The bill, sponsored by Gov. Philip La Follette, would have enabled the State to finance $209,000,000 in a State work relief program from the Federal allotment of $100,000,000. Democratic opponents said the issuance of scrip was unnecessary, because the State could not spend $100,000,000 in the next 11 months.

Defeat of the bill placed Wisconsin in the same status as the other 47 states in regard to Federal-financed work relief.

SUHRE-BUSCH STOCK SUIT DRAWS TO CLOSE

W. Fred Anheuser Explains Transaction by Which He Acquired Shares.

Conclusion of testimony before Circuit Judge O'Malley was expected today in the suit of Mrs. Lily Anheuser Suhre, 3131 Russell boulevard, against the estate of August A. Busch, late head of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., to recover 625 shares of the brewery stock, now worth more than $54,000.

Mrs. Suhre, a relative of the Busch family, deposited the stock with Mark C. Steinberg, broker, in 1929, to cover margins on trading accounts. The stock passed into Steinberg's possession and in August, 1929, W. Fred Anheuser, a vice-president of Anheuser-Busch, bought the shares from Steinberg. She charged that Anheuser acted as agent for Busch, which Anheuser denied.

On cross-examination yesterday Anheuser explained his refusal to say at the trial of another suit whether he bought this stock as Busch's agent by saying he did not think this point entered into the other case.

Clark Bennett, treasurer and former assistant treasurer of Anheuser-Busch, testified as to how Anheuser obtained a loan of $40,000 from the company in 1930. He could not recall whether Anheuser had said what he wanted the money for, but he related that Anheuser deposited the certificate for the 625 shares as security on the note, Jan. 23, 1930. The following Feb. 12, Bennett continued, Busch announced he had bought this stock from Anheuser and was assuming the loan. Busch signed a substitute note for $40,000 and the collateral was transferred to his name. The witness added, and the following March 19 Busch paid the note, including $311 interest.

Cross-examined, Bennett explained that, as credit manager, he had authority to make "small loans" without any specific maximum limitation to customers, but that the advance to Anheuser was the only loan he made not to a customer. He said he knew Anheuser was able to pay the note and that he had no authority from officers to make this loan, except Anheuser was an officer. However, Anheuser had testified he did not request the loan as an official act.

George A. H. Mills, secretary of the company, told the Court the 625 shares were transferred to Busch's name. In showing the value of the stock, the estate called C. D. Russell, auditor of the company. Russell quoted annual operating losses as follows: 1930, $706,630; 1931, $765,289; 1932, $639,792. However, he pointed out that in some of those years sale of real estate or income from investments resulted in a net profit for the business. In 1932, due to the legalization of "real beer," operating profits were $1,370,000 and in the first six months of 1934 they were $854,281, Russell related. The other suit mentioned in Anheuser's testimony was brought by Mrs. Suhre to recover another block of the brewery stock now worth more than $100,000. She charged that she sold it to Busch during the prohibition period, with the right to buy it back. This suit has been tried but not decided.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., June 14.—Police investigating the murder of 81-year-old James Coulson, whose assailant battered his head with a hatchet and then drove a nail into his skull, questioned Coulson's nephew and a 73-year-old neighbor today.

Coulson, a retired farmer, died a few hours after he was taken to a hospital from his home in nearby Hileman's Grove. The men detained for questioning are James Coulson, 33, and Harry Raiston. Raiston was quoted by County Detective John P. Kilgore as saying a man rushed into the Coulson home while Raiston was there, attacked Coulson and fled.

DOCTOR CONVICTED IN LANCASTER CASE

Guilty of Performing Operation Alleged to Have Caused Woman's Death.

By the Associated Press.
LANCASTER, Pa., June 14.—A jury of workmen and housewives has convicted Dr. H. C. Zimmerly, 67-year-old village physician, of the illegal operation which the State charged, caused the midnight death of Mrs. Gladys Lawson of Calvert, Md., in his rural "house of horrors." He was sentenced today to seven and one-half to 15 years in prison for performing illegal operations. The doctor pleaded guilty today to a similar operation upon Miss Elsie Miller of Rising Sun, Md., and to two violations of the narcotic laws. Two other narcotics charges were set aside by the court. Richard Parker, Zimmerly's "hired man," pleaded guilty to a narcotics charge. The court suspended sentence. W. Hensel Brown, Parker's attorney, asking the court for mercy, said he and Parker attended school together as boys and that Parker once was shot while at play.

Not Guilty on One Count.
After pondering for less than four hours the story told by witnesses, the jury last night convicted the gray-haired surgeon, but found him not guilty of one count of the indictment which said a "child did die" in the tragedy in the makeshift "hospital" of his strange farm house.

The village doctor listened to his fate last night without emotion. His only gesture was to pull his coat collar up about his throat. He even put the counsel table chairs in place before he was led back to his cell in the county jail.

Exhibits Before Jury.
Zimmerly's trial came to an abrupt end late yesterday when the State closed its case and the defense rested without offering testimony.

Defense counsel had attacked the scientific testimony of State's witnesses who said that bone fragments found on Zimmerly's farm were those of a woman. These fragments, as well as a 50-pound lard can partly filled with a fleshy substance, clothing identified as Mrs. Lawson's, and saws found after the State contended the body was hacked in an upstairs room of the doctor's home, were carried into the jury room when the jurors began their deliberations.

Witnesses Told of Death.
The State laid the story before the jury principally by the testimony of four witnesses—Blanche Stone, domestic and "nurse" for Zimmerly; Parker; Dr. John W. Rice, Bucknell University pathologist; and Beatrice Trimble, Lancaster waitress and friend of Mrs. Lawson, who told of taking her to Dr. Zimmerly's farm.

Parker and Miss Stone related how they sat, with Zimmerly, in the dimly-lit living room of the farmhouse, listening to the moans and cries of pain from the room in which Mrs. Lawson lay after the alleged operation.

Finally, they testified, Zimmerly left the living room and went upstairs. Later he came down and said: "Well, she's gone."

PERJURY CHARGED AT TRIAL IN ELECTION PARADE KILLINGS

Three Witnesses Arrested After Second Hearing in Kelayres (Pa.) Shootings.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., June 14.—Three witnesses at the second of the Kelayres election parade murder trials are under arrest, charged with giving perjured testimony.

William Chevinsky, Benjamin Festa and Milla Carr, sister of one of the seven men indicted in connection with the killing of five persons when a Democratic election eve parade was fired on in the nearby mining village of Kelayres last November, were held in $1000 bail each yesterday.

Warrants issued on instructions of Louis Buono, chief county detective, charge the three gave false testimony at the second trial of Joseph J. Bruno, former political leader, when each testified they saw men shooting toward Bruno's home. Bruno was convicted of second degree murder. Six of his kindred face charges of murder.

CARLETON DRY GOODS PAYMENT

Final Disbursement to Be $2.60 on 40,000 Shares.

The final disbursement in liquidation of the Carleton Dry Goods Co. will be a payment of $2.60 to the holders of the 40,000 shares of common stock, stockholders were informed in letters sent out yesterday.

A special meeting was called for June 25 to ratify the plan and dissolve the company, which sold its inventory 10 years ago to the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. The final payment will bring the total paid to stockholders in liquidation to about $50 a share.

APARTMENT OWNER OBJECTS TO TAVERN USING PARKING LOT

Says Customers of Place at De Baliviere and Pershing Are Noisy; Lights Shine in Rooms.

A suit asking that Walco, Inc., operators of a liquor store and tavern on the southeast corner of De Baliviere and Pershing avenues, be enjoined from using ground in the rear of an apartment building at 5637 Pershing avenue as a free parking lot for customers, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Louise Bahret, owner of the apartment.

Mrs. Bahret charged the lot is a nuisance, that it is used until the early hours of the morning, the customers are frequently noisy, and the lights of their cars shine into apartments.

YOUTH TESTIFIES HE SAW CONVICT SHOOT TROOPER

Iowan Who Confessed Killing Sheriff at Columbia, Mo., Goes on Stand Against Companion.

By the Associated Press.
FULTON, Mo., June 14.—Francis McNelly, young Iowa farmer and confessed killer, took the witness stand today and told a Circuit Court jury he and George McKeever, North Dakota convict on trial for his life, shot and killed two officers at Columbia on June 14, 1933, two years ago today.

The testimony was the key to the State's case against McKeever, charged with the murder of Sgt. Ben Booth of the State Highway Patrol, after he and Sheriff Roger Wilson stopped two men in an automobile and questioned them about a bank robbery. McNelly has pleaded guilty of killing the Sheriff and is awaiting sentence.

McNelly told how he killed the Sheriff and fired one shot into the back of Sgt. Booth. Then, he testified, McKeever took the pistol, stood over Booth where he had fallen wounded and fired the fatal shot into Booth's back.

McKeever was undisturbed outwardly as McNelly, his one-time companion, recited his version of the killing of the two men. He averted his eyes from the witness, however.

State highway troops continued today to keep close guard on the crowded courtroom, but because of the criticism that has been directed at them by defense attorneys, they were not in uniform and weapons were not visible.

Merle A. Gill, Kansas City gun and ballistics expert yesterday identified a bullet removed from Booth's leg as one fired from a pistol which the prosecution contends McKeever had in his possession at the time of the killing.

Gill's testimony also linked the pistol with one stolen from a Gretna (Neb.) bank during a holdup in which McKeever is alleged to have participated. Albert R. Stelling, assistant cashier of the bank, took the stand and identified McKeever as one of the robbers.

The pistol from which was fired a bullet into Booth's leg also discharged a pellet into the earth beneath the Gretna bank during the robbery, Gill said after comparing both bullets.

LINCOLN SAVINGS & LOAN IS TAKEN OVER BY STATE

Ira McBride Appointed Liquidating Receiver by Court; Firm Insolvent, He Says.

Ira A. McBride, State supervisor of building and loan associations, was appointed yesterday by Circuit Judge Baron liquidating receiver for the Lincoln Savings & Loan Association, 411 Olive street.

In his petition McBride stated that the company is insolvent, having a deficit of $18,602, and that the directors of the company requested that he take charge of the liquidation. He expressed the opinion that the book value of assets exceeds the actual worth, as considerable of the assets remain from the old Lincoln Housing Trust, which the association took over in 1923.

OLD ENGLISH LAW LIKELY TO SAVE WOMAN KIDNAPER

Attorneys Point Out That It Is Assumed That Mrs.
Waley Acted Under Husband's Dominance.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)
TACOMA, Wash., June 14.—A principle of old English law—that a wife, in the presence of her husband, is presumed to act under his dominance—was said by Tacoma attorneys today to be likely to save Mrs. Harmon M. Waley from a life sentence for kidnapping 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser.

While the 19-year-old Mrs. Waley and her ex-convict husband remained incommunicado in the county jail at Olympia, Federal agents followed up fresh clues in their intensive search for William Mahan, the third suspect in the $200,000 kidnapping.

Near Butte, Mont., they searched a mountain cabin, from which an occupant was thought to have fled when the owner approached it yesterday. Fingerprints were taken of articles in the cabin to determine if the recent resident might have been Mahan.

Meaning of Old Law.
Attorneys cited a bit of jurisprudence from the Middle Ages which is an important part of modern Federal law, that a wife has no will of her own.

It holds, in effect, that when a wife takes part in a crime with her husband, she is assumed to be acting under his control—that Mrs. Waley helped to secrete the boy, helped to take him into Idaho, and helped to pass part of the $200,000 ransom money under her husband's duress.

It is said that Mrs. Waley contends she knew nothing about the kidnapping until the boy was taken to the hideout in Spokane, when Mahan told her she was just as deep in the kidnapping as he or her husband.

Federal agents say that captured Waley through his wife's confession, then both Waleys confessed, implicating Mahan and helping to recover much of the loot.

The Plea of Guilt.
When the Waleys pleaded not guilty and waived a preliminary hearing they decided, theoretically, to fight the Cochran kidnapping law and the charge that they conspired to defraud the Weyerhaeusers.

The action saved the Government from exposing any of its case.

But when the Waleys refused to employ counsel, Tacoma lawyers said, it was an indication that the pair, once indicted, would change their pleas.

The attorneys speculated that Mrs. Waley would admit the conspiracy and that Waley might choose to fight the kidnapping charges, because a wife cannot testify against her husband.

AAA AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED
BY HOUSE AGRICULTURE GROUP

Committee to Go Through Formally Today of Voting On Agreement Already Reached.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 14.—Legislation intended by its authors to clinch the constitutionality of the administration's farm program was agreed on yesterday by the House Agriculture Committee. It is scheduled for consideration on the floor next week.

Revised in an effort to make the AAA conform to the standards of the Supreme Court's NRA decision, the legislation still retains many of the provisions sought by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Today the Agriculture Committee will go through the formality of balloting approval of the agreement already reached.

Senator Capper (Rep.), Kansas, said that the bill leaves essentially unchanged the processing tax and benefit payments to growers of basic agricultural commodities.

The bill retains discretionary power for Wallace to "order" marketing agreements on handlers of milk, tobacco, fruit (excluding apples), vegetables (excluding those for canning), naval stores and turpentine—if 50 per cent of the handlers by volume want such agreements or if two-thirds of the producers in a given class desire them. The measure also bars suits to recover processing taxes even should the adjustment law be declared unconstitutional.

PRINCE OF WALES' NEW PLANE
Has Cocktail Bar and Six Armchairs in Cabin.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, June 14.—The Prince of Wales has bought a new 160-mile-an-hour airplane, but he still is a back-seat pilot by royal command.

The Prince for years has done a good part of his traveling by air and is said to be a competent pilot, often steering his private craft for hours at a time. He never has been permitted to fly solo, being accompanied always by his personal pilot, Lieut. Edward Fielden. The new machine is a twin-engine biplane, with fuel capacity sufficient for nonstop journeys anywhere within the British Isles. There are six comfortable armchairs in the cabin, with a writing desk and cocktail bar.

ANOTHER STRIKE BEGINS IN TOLEDO POWER PLANTS

Workers Who Were Out
18 Hours a Week Ago
Quit Jobs Again and Form Picket Lines.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., June 14. Union electrical workers who called off a strike at plants of the Toledo Edison Co. a week ago started another one today and re-established their picket lines.

Toledo Edison furnishes power to the heavily industrial Toledo district and to an area of about 800 square miles in Northwestern Ohio, Eastern Indiana and Southern Michigan. Company executives said there was no immediate danger of a power shortage.

The strike a week ago lasted 18 hours and was ended at the request of international officers of the Electrical Workers' Union. The company maintained the normal supply of power at that time by bringing in outside current over feeder lines.

A union committee, headed by Oliver S. Myers, business agent, issued a statement expressing dissatisfaction with the progress of negotiations between union officers and representatives of the company. The statement said the union committee had received "sufficient evidence to believe that the company intended to delay negotiations and obtain the benefit of time to defeat the men in their lawful right to strike." The company employs about 500 workers.

E. L. McBee, superintendent of the power plant, said he would have enough men to keep the plant in operation. The picket lines were formed a short time after the strike was voted and workers on the night shift were informed of the action. Union officials said the strike vote was unanimous.

The union contract with the company expired June 1. The electrical workers then demanded a 30 per cent wage increase and called the first strike when the company turned down the demand. The union also turned down a company offer to arbitrate the wage issue.

WACO, Tex., June 14.—Gov. T. Anderson, Calvert, Tex., prominent cotton planter and former member of the board of regents of Texas A. and M. College, and Miss Dorothy Buchanan of Waco were burned fatally late yesterday when fire destroyed several rooms of a house here. Origin of the fire was not determined. The house was in flames when the Fire Department arrived. Miss Buchanan's body was found in the bathroom.

FINE COACHING AGAINST BAER'S RIGHT WINS FOR BRADDOCK

JIMMY REALLY WINNER IN TWO ROUNDS LOST BY MAX ON FOULS

No Money Bet On Braddock at Tom Kearney's

NO MONEY was accepted on the Braddock-Baer fight by Tom Kearney, the local betting commissioner, according to Charley Burke, who is handling the business during Kearney's illness. Burke's explanation was that "they didn't like the fight in the first place."

There was a scarcity of Braddock money, everybody wanting to back Baer at odds of 1 to 2 or 3 to 5, but Burke wouldn't accept the bets.

He had his foot, poking lefts at Max's eyes and occasionally lashing out with a right. Max, brown as mahogany, postured, danced and grinned, but made few efforts at the start. The crowd took this to mean that the mighty Max was reluctant to hurt little Jimmy. He grimaced, strutted and even dropped his hands to face the crowd while Braddock thumped him with his left.

"He'll kill Braddock when he wants to," a neighbor ventured. "He's working for the pictures," another suggested. "He'll make more if it goes seven or eight rounds."

But round after round went by. Braddock patiently following the program, circled and circled, Max walking slowly after him, Braddock making occasional dashes when he thought Max could not get him with his right.

It was not until the seventh and eighth round that Baer really began to take an interest in the proceedings. He was far behind on points, at this time. He had not a round to his credit, but fans were saying to themselves, "any time now," and really Braddock looked too small to stand up against a real champion.

In the seventh round Max started to loosen up. Finding he could not reach Braddock with his right, he began to try his left and to fight in clinches. At this style, he won a lot of applause and cheers from the crowd. He backhanded Braddock; he hit him on the breakaway, and he hit him low. He tried to apologize once or twice, but while Braddock smiled, the crowd gave Max the Bronx cheer.

Braddock becomes bolder. Round after round went by and Braddock improved. Whereas, he was cautious and wary at the start, he later became bolder and at times landed punches with Baer, without suffering too badly.

After the tenth round the crowd began to sense that the fight was not Baer's to end when he wished and that he was trying his level best to get to Braddock. But the later watching his corner all the time, followed instructions literally and successfully. He evaded the now anxious Baer at almost every turn.

In the latter rounds Baer mauled Braddock roughly whenever they clinched, shooting uppercuts with front and backhand, and jarring Braddock heavily. But Jimmy took it gamely and invariably landed back lefts, lefts, lefts without end with an occasional pot shot at Baer's jaw, he more than evened each round.

In the last two sessions, Baer, sensing defeat, tried his best to land that right; but Braddock was too foxy to be trapped. Baer's rights slipped off his shoulder or were caught on Jimmy's glove with out material damage. It is doubtful if Baer, during the entire bout, found Braddock's head half a dozen times with a clean right, and only once or twice was it effective.

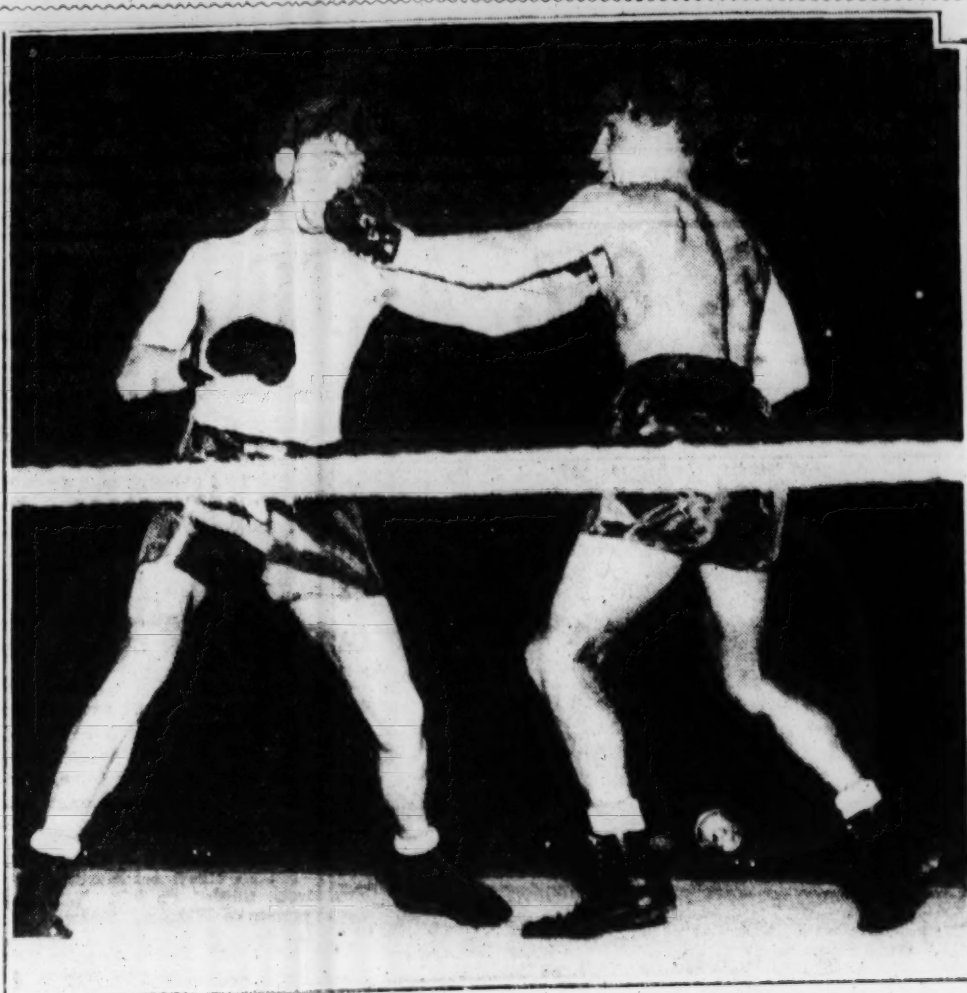

Opening of Last Round. The din was deafening in the last round opened and the crowd realized that only a knockout by Baer could make up the difference in the score by rounds. Max charged in and fought roughly and savagely. No smile on his grim face now. A fortune and a future were at stake. Braddock was cautious, staying in close, head on Baer's chest, knowing that Max had to finish him to win. While Baer had the advantage of the final round, it was insufficient to even up the score and a "new champion" was proclaimed.

At the finish all the nonchalance with which Baer opened the fight and carried on for more than half the battle had been completely wiped off his face. He was grim looking and he had a real right to be. He had lost a title and a chance to make a really substantial fortune to a boxer who lacks both color and championship quality, and he had lost it because of his own shortcoming.

Baer's Judgment Poor. Failure to fight offensively in the last two years undoubtedly beat Baer. He showed poor judgment of distance and timing throughout the bout and found the slow-moving, hitherto easy-to-hit Braddock, who once lost a fight to Al Stillman, a mystery he could not solve. Baer's defeat will be a warning to all future champions not to let the first of idleness set in.

Max Baer Is Sixth Champion to Lose In Garden's Bowl

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14. THE jinx hanging over champions in Madison Square Garden's Long Island bowl was even stronger last night as Max Baer, in the thirteenth heavyweight title match recognized in championship history, lost his title to James J. Braddock on the thirteenth day of the month.

Baer is the sixth champion to lose his title in the Bowl since the place was built in 1932. No boxing ruler has ever defended a championship successfully in the Bowl.

Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, Primo Carnera and Baer, among the heavyweights, and Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin in the lighter classes lost their titles.

Can find another "rags to riches" theme in this young fellow's career. In the young fellow's career, the title was won by a small to stand up against a real champion.

Jimmy Johnson, the matchmaker, who was so severely criticized for arranging the Braddock-Baer bout, was hoarse today as a result of repeating the phrase: "Didn't I tell you?"

With the members of the New York Commission, which named Braddock the logical challenger, he spent the greater part of the early morning hours accepting apologies from his critics—your correspondent among others.

Among the distinguished occupants of press seats were John Roosevelt, son of the President, who was all shot up by a horde of photographers. He emerged smiling. Other distinguished press row visitors were Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler and several ladies of the stage and radio. Almost half of the five rows were occupied by newspaper men.

Scores of writers from other cities, some from Canada and one from England, who were at the ringside, will remain over for the dinner Jack Dempsey will give for them tonight at his tavern. A majority will stay here until the Carnera battle, which is expected to prove much more of a fight than the championship itself.

BRADDOCK AGREES TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST SCHMELING NEXT YEAR

Baer Agrees to Meet Winner of Carnera-Louis Bout.

NEW YORK, June 14. — Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Club, announced late today that Max Baer had agreed to fight in September the winner of the June 25 match here between Joe Louis, Detroit Negro, and Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion.

WIRAY'S COLUMN

The Greatest Mile Race.

NEW YORK, June 14. THE athletic world will focus its attention on Palmer Stadium, tomorrow, for the greatest mile race in all history, when six runners, five from America and one from New Zealand, will toe the mark in the Princeton invitation event.

Among the six are the only three runners who have traveled one mile in faster time than four minutes and nine seconds—Jack Lovelock of New Zealand; Bill Bonthon of the N. Y. A. C. and Glenn Cunningham of the Iowa Graduate School.

The other three are Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania U. and Glen Dawson, Tulsa, S. C., who proudly enroll themselves as members of the "I Beat Cunningham Club" and Joseph Mangano of the N. Y. A. C.

Until last Monday only five starters had been named, Mangano having received his bid then. Mangano is a Cornell product, and is strong at distances from a mile to two miles, his best time is 4:15, which doesn't qualify him. The experiences of Venzke and Dawson in a great majority of races with Cunningham indicate that the event will be a three-man affair, if every runner is in top form, although Dawson and Venzke each own one victory over Cunningham, the ace of them all.

Cunningham's great mile in 4 minutes, 57 seconds, represents the peak of mile running for all time. Lovelock, however, in a race at Palmer Stadium, won the same event two years ago and showed almost equal class when he ran distance in 4 minutes, 76 seconds, beating Bonthon, who was timed in 4 minutes, 87 seconds.

Such competition can only mean that, with conditions O.K. and all contestants at their peak, a new record is probable, possibly the mythical mile in 4 minutes flat will be approached.

A few years ago athletic officials would have declared a four-minute mile an impossibility; today, well, anything is possible when three aces of this class meet.

Not the Only Classic.

THERE are six events on the Princeton invitation program: The pole vault, the two-mile run, the 40-yard dash, the 120-high hurdles, the half-mile and the mile. They will be run in the order named and the first race will start at 3 o'clock (St. Louis time).

Laterally the pick of the country will compete in each event on the card. If you doubt, look over the list as follows:

POLE VAULT—Keith Brown, Yale; William Graber, Ontario, Cal.; J. A. McWilliams, Princeton; Eldon Stutzman, Syracuse; Oscar Sutermeister, Boston A. A.

TWO MILE—Henry Nielson, Denmark; Raymond Sears, Butler University; Joseph P. McCluskey, N. Y. A. C.; Don Lash, Indiana; Harold Manning, Wichita A. C.; Frank Crowley, N. Y. A. C. QUARTER-MILE—Glenn Hardin, Louisiana State; James La Valle, U. C. I. A.; Ivan Fuqua, Indiana; Edward T. O'Brien, Syracuse; Robert J. Kane, Cornell Law School.

120-YARD HURDLES—Percy Beard, N. Y. C. A.; Johnny Morris, Southwestern Louisiana; Albin Moreau, Marksville (La.) K. of C.; John S. Collier, Boston A.

THE FIGHT—BLOW BY BLOW

By the Associated Press.

ROUND ONE—Baer, instead of rushing, backed carefully away and Braddock hammered two rights at his side. The champion sneered as Braddock, pressing steadily forward, whipped a left hook to the head but missed a long right. Braddock took a short right uppercut to the chin but missed a hard right to the chin. Max missed a left hook to the head and took two left hooks on the chin as the crowd cheered the challenger's amazingly fine start. Twice Braddock jabbed Baer's head with lefts before digging a hard right into Baer's head. Neatly Braddock speared the champion's head with lefts, then pounded his body with rights as the champion waited for an opening. Baer was blinking at the bell. It was Braddock's round by a wide margin.

ROUND TWO—Very casual about it all, Baer danced out and Braddock popped him twice with lefts to the head. Baer, the bigger man, laughed and posed as Braddock shot three lefts to the head and a right to the body. Braddock outjabbed Baer with a half dozen lefts and knocked the champion's head back with a right uppercut. Baer took loose for the first time, with a two-fisted barrage to the head. Braddock slugged right back. A half dozen times Braddock stabbed Baer's head with lefts then crossed three full rights to the chin. Max clowned, danced and laughed as he missed a long right to the head. The champion made a gesture right as he was holding back his right, capable of letting it go for the kill at any time. He slapped Braddock in friendly fashion on the shoulder as the bell rang. Braddock's round.

ROUND THREE—Stoically and stolid, Braddock marched out with his chin tucked low, jabbing Baer's head with his left. Baer suddenly put on his fiendish visage and slung a hard left and right into Braddock's body. The champion stopped quickly and Braddock beat him about the head with a half dozen lefts and rights. Baer missed a long right and they slugged at each other's body, heads together in midring, with most of the blows landing on each other's elbows. Braddock's left hook twice was wild but he drove two hard rights to Baer's head. Baer stalked him, sinking a powerful left in Braddock's body, but Jimmy slugged right back, having much the better of it as he poured lefts and rights into the champion's head. Braddock nailed him again with a left and a right, and Baer was spitting blood as he went to his corner. Braddock's round.

ROUND FOUR—They came out very slowly and Braddock stabbed three lefts to the champion's head. Baer drilled both hands into Braddock's body as they clinched and contorted his face fiendishly. Baer nearly wrestled Braddock off his feet and the crowd boomed. Baer raised both hands apologetically to the crowd. Fiendish again for a moment, Baer shot two rights to the side, caught the arm Braddock with a right uppercut, but Jimmy stabbed back at him with a left and made the champion bend with rights to the body. Braddock took a hard right to the chin against the ropes, the best blow Baer had landed, but fell into a clinch, shook his head clear and took another right to the head without wincing. A long right to the cheek knocked Braddock to the ropes but he tore back with a right to the body as the bell sounded. It was Baer's round by a close margin.

ROUND FIVE—Baer lazily came to mid-ring as Braddock again jabbed his head with a half dozen lefts. Baer tore madly to close quarters, hammering both hands into the challenger's sides. A hard right bounced off Braddock's chin but Jimmy tore back with thudding rights to the head. They stabbed slowly in midring, fell into a clinch, and Baer was warned for backhanding. Baer landed three right-hand uppercuts, drove a hard right to Braddock's body and complained. Jimmy's right was low. Punching madly, Baer tore after the challenger, landed two long rights to the head but took a half dozen full smashes to the chin in return. Baer nailed his challenger with a right to the temple and stalked him, threatening with his right hand, but doing nothing about it as the bell rang. Referee McAvoey awarded the round to Braddock for backhanding.

ROUND SIX—Baer ripped into Braddock with a half dozen short rights to the head. He split Braddock's nose with a right uppercut. Braddock pulled away from the onslaught and stabbed two lefts into the champion's head. Baer threw a long right into Jimmy's head and Braddock smashed back with both hands, rocking the champion's head with a volley of rights. Baer nailed after his racket had hit the ball. The max prevented calling of foot faults; but it was also max for a lot more double faults in trying to hit that postage stamp court.

GERMANY GAINS 2-0 LEAD OVER AUSTRALIA IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

BERLIN, June 14.—Germany's Davis Cup tennis team sprang a sensational surprise today by gaining a 2-0 lead over Australia in the European zone semifinals round series.

Gottfried von Cramm, top-ranking German star, trounced Jack Crawford in the opening match, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2 and Heiner Henkel then put the Teutons two up with a 4-6, 2-6, 6-0, 6-2 victory over Vivian McGrath.

Australia, previously favored to win the zone finals and face the United States in the interzone finals, now has the double tomorrow and the final two singles matches Sunday to remain in the running, an all but impossible feat.

Archery Tourney Change.

A change in the schedule of the Missouri State Archery tournament was announced yesterday by Alfred H. Wyman of the local archery club. The change shifts the men's York round from tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock to tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The women's round will be in the morning as scheduled.

It was Baer's round by a narrow margin.

ROUND FIFTEEN—They shook hands and Braddock stabbed the champion's head with a left, then locked in close in a body smashing duel. Braddock backed away, looped a left hook to the head and stepped back in to hold as Baer hammered furiously on the challenger's body. They leaned on each other again, clubbing, wrestling in close, slugging wearily to the body. Mad, Baer sought an opening for his right but the best he could do was drum the challenger's side and then rip his head with a half dozen right uppercuts. They landed in close again, and Braddock shot a hard right to the head. Desperately Baer threw everything he had in a mad assault on the challenger, but Jimmy stood like a rock and slugged back with everything he had. They were standing there punching as the final bell rang. It was Baer's round.

WIFE ON STAND DENIES PAYING TO HAVE MAN KILLED

Mrs. Lyddane Says Charge of Murder Plot Against Husband and Other Woman Is False.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKVILLE, Md., June 14.—Mrs. Anne Lyddane, 31-year-old bank secretary, took the stand in her own defense today and denied that she had ever entered a conspiracy to murder or made down payments for the killing of her husband and Mrs. Arthur Beall.

She said she was the victim of a blackmail plot and had paid out "hush money" to several men who threatened to disclose information about her and Arthur Beall, husband of the woman whom the State charges was one of her intended victims.

Mrs. Lyddane, a slender smartly dressed woman, addressed the Court in a low, firm voice.

Mrs. Josephine Beall, garage man's wife whom testified she once surprised her husband and Mrs. Lyddane in a tryst.

"It was a night in June three years ago," Mrs. Beall said, "when I saw my husband and Mrs. Lyddane in an automobile in our drive. Arthur asked me not to make a fuss. He held me."

Mrs. Lyddane threw her car in gear. She backed away and ran the car into a ditch. As she tried to get the car on the drive she kept looking back. When she saw that Arthur was still holding me, she laughed in my face."

"This Mrs. Beall said was on the night before her youngest child was born. She added that she went to Mrs. Lyddane after that and asked her to let her husband alone."

"How many conversations have you had with Mrs. Lyddane?" State's Attorney Fuch asked.

"Several," she sobbed.

Two years ago Mrs. Beall filed suit for divorce, naming Mrs. Lyddane as co-defendant. She withdrew the suit two days later.

"John 'Gooey' Carroll, an ex-convict bartender, testified yesterday that Beall and Mrs. Lyddane had gone to his room in a tavern where he worked.

"What kind of a room?" the prosecutor asked. "A bedroom," was the reply.

Lyddane, clerk in a liquor store, says he does not think his wife conspired to kill him. He accompanied her to the trial.

Carroll and Harry E. Thomas testified that Mrs. Lyddane had plotted her husband's death and that they had received down payments from her for his assassination.

RAILROAD CO-ORDINATOR
BILL PASSED BY CONGRESS

Measure Continues Eastman's Post Another Year; Class One Roads to Pay Expense.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Congressional action was completed today on the bill of the administration transportation bills when the House passed and sent to the White House the Senate bill to continue the Federal transportation co-ordinator's post another year.

The House Interstate Commerce Committee, in reporting Chairman Rayburn's bill, cut out the provision for continuing the $2-a-mile annual assessment on Class One railroads to pay the co-ordinator's expenses, but on the floor the Senate bill was substituted carrying that provision.

This assured financing the post without having to go directly to the Treasury, and also avoided delay by sending the legislation back to the Senate. Speed was essential, because Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman's job expires Sunday night under existing law.

CONGRESSMAN SAYS ADMIRALS SHOULD KEEP MOUTHS SHUT

Maverick Comments on One Reported to Have Advocated War Against Russia.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The navy's Admirals were advised yesterday by Representative Maverick (Dem., Texas), to keep their mouths "shut" and do what they are told.

His statement, made on the House floor during debate, was prompted by a newspaper article, in which, he said, Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, gave "an absolute advocacy of war by the nations of Europe and all capitalistic nations, including this, against Russia."

Maverick objected to a sentence about Congress being afraid of Communists because many members have them in their districts.

"An Admiral," he said, "is no more than a dignified policeman and should keep his mouth shut and do what he is told. Foreign policy is wholly in the hands of the Secretary of State. And it is none of the business of hited hands of the Government to be making the policy for Congress."

MAN WHO KILLED 6 HANGED

Former Quebec Postal Carrier Was Tried Only for One Death.

By the Associated Press.

QUEBEC, June 14.—Rosaire Bilodeau, 40-year-old former Quebec postal carrier, was hanged today for the murder of Octave Fiset, superintendent of letter carriers, whom he shot in the general postoffice here Oct. 25. Bilodeau was held criminally responsible by a Coroner's jury for the death of Fiset and five of his own relatives, whom he killed in a nearby wood shortly before entering the postoffice and fatally wounding the superintendent. He was tried only on the one charge.

Alexander Savard was hanged at the same time for the murder of his 9-day-old child, who was suffocated Jan. 26.

AMERICAN MANAGER OF MILL IN CUBA GETS SIX MONTHS

By the Associated Press.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, June 14.—Edward J. Koch, 45 years old, an American, was sentenced by Urgency Court to six months' imprisonment yesterday for failure to appear when cited for violation of labor laws.

Koch, manager of the American owned Central Miranda Sugar Mill, said he did not appear at a hearing before an inspector of the Labor Department last December, because he lacked authorization from his company.

Several hours after being put in the city jail to serve his sentence, Koch was sent to the Civil Hospital.

COMMON-LAW WEDDING DESCRIBED IN WILL SUIT

Witness Says She Saw Lionel Barbour Married to Woman Who Left $700,000 Estate.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 14.—A story of the ceremonial marriage of Lionel Barbour and Mrs. Fannie Bishop Henderson, Aurora (Ill.) woman who died in 1931 at the age of 78, was related yesterday in Federal Court.

Miss Sadie McIntosh, of Detroit, testified she had witnessed the ritual that Barbour, now 42 years old, alleges made him the common-law husband of Mrs. Henderson. Barbour seeks to set aside the will in which Mrs. Henderson left most of her $700,000 estate for the foundation of a home for the aged. It was in the middle of August, in 1925, Miss McIntosh said, that she and her sister, Mrs. Christine Stadler, were called to the Barbour home. There, Mrs. Henderson exhibited a document, the witness added, that was drawn by a lawyer and designed to make the marriage "legal in Michigan and all over the world." Miss McIntosh said they joined hands before a mirror and repeated these words:

"I, Fannie Henderson, take you, Lionel Barbour, as my lawful wedded husband until death do us part."

"I, Lionel Barbour, take you, Fannie Henderson, as my lawful wedded wife until death do us part."

Previously, Lionel's brother, Herbert R. Barbour of Detroit, testified Mrs. Henderson had paid Lionel's tuition in law school, had provided him with a $100 monthly allowance and had presented him with an expensive automobile, several hunting rifles, clothes, binoculars and a camera. Concerning the purported marriage, he said:

"Fannie arrived on Aug. 25, 1925, which was a Sunday. She said she wanted to get married right away. Lionel said it was impossible to get married on Sunday, but she said she knew a way and produced this document. It contained instructions for common law marriage.

The defense contends that at the time Lionel was at the Henderson home in Aurora with a broken leg.

ILLINOIS SENATORS DROP CHICAGO U. RED INQUIRY

Special Committee Votes 3 to 2 to Discontinue Investigations Based on Waigreen Charges.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14.—A special Senate committee voted three to two yesterday to discontinue its investigation of alleged Communist teachings at the University of Chicago.

Protests were made by Charles W. Baker, Monroe Center Republican, who sponsored the resolution after Charles D. Waigreen, Chicago chain drug store executive, charged his niece was exposed to Communist doctrines while a student at the university.

Baker immediately introduced a bill for a joint commission of five members of each house to carry on the investigation and report to the 1937 legislative session.

On the ground that nothing has been accomplished in hearings at Chicago, Richey V. Graham of Cicero, the chairman, James J. Barbour of Evanston and W. H. Hickman of Paris, voted to hold no further meetings.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14. — A new accomplishment of preventive medicine, is promised in the possibilities of vaccinating children against whooping cough, according to Dr. A. C. Baxter, assistant Illinois State Health Director, who announced here today that whooping cough is now the greatest of all epidemic disease hazards for children under three years of age.

While often an inconsequential infection for older children whooping cough is a deadly disease for babies, having been responsible for 1017 deaths in Illinois during the last five years. "Vaccination appears to be quite effective in preventing the disease," Dr. Baxter said. "Several thousand infants have been vaccinated by Illinois physicians who reported recently that the results are very encouraging."

"Strangely enough whooping cough is more fatal to the small town and rural babies than to their urban cousins. The death rate from this disease in the small towns and country areas of the state is 30 per cent higher than in the cities of more than 10,000 population. Eight months of age is recommended as the best time for vaccination."

CITY HALL WAITS FOR NEXT MOVE BY MAYOR IN ROW

Employees Anxious to Learn Whether More Are to Be Fired in Democratic Party Wrangle.

REPLY TO ALDERMEN CONSIDERED LIKELY

City Committee Members Say Speech at Jefferson Day Dinner Caused Fight on Hannegan.

City employees, and Democratic aldermen and city committee members who are fighting Mayor Dickmann, waited today to see whether the Mayor would proclaim a new list of dismissals from the city payroll, in addition to 27 thus far, or would merely write a second letter to the 17 hostile aldermen.

The Aldermen, in their second letter to the Mayor yesterday, indicated that any proposal of a truce would have to come from him. The Mayor will control patronage for the rest of his term, ending in April, 1937, and the Aldermen intend to control legislation.

In the letter, prepared by Alderman Nick Reidy, they upbraided the Mayor for discharging "poor and defenseless" city employees who had supported him. They replied to the Mayor's complaint over the removal of Robert E. Hannegan as chairman of the Democratic City Committee, and election of John P. English, Recorder of Deeds, to the chairmanship.

The letter was signed by Aldermen Fitzsimmons, Routledge, Reidy, Brown, Slav, Byrge, Schweppe, Ziegenbalg, Murray, Litchen, John O'Connor, Gummels, Charles O'Connor, Peterson, Collins, Hastey and Israel.

Committeemen Explain.

Members of the city committee who voted for the Hannegan-English overturn, thereby starting the Mayor on his course of reprisals, say Hannegan's speech at the Jefferson day dinner, April 13, was a factor in the difficulty.

In his dinner speech, Hannegan criticized Democratic Aldermen who had not co-operated with Mayor Dickmann, referring to them as "disgraced Democrats who have more now than ever before." He warned the 14 newly elected Aldermen not to permit any individual to stir up strife among them.

Mayor Dickmann, indorsing Hannegan's speech, told the diners that "if you don't want to go along with a united group of Democrats, you would better go to the other party."

This, instead of bringing harmony, aroused resentment, not only against Hannegan, but against the Mayor, who, some of the Aldermen say, interfered unduly in the ward contests for nominations to the Board in the March primary.

Hannegan's speech was interpreted to mean that any Alderman or committee member who opposed the Mayor was not a good Democrat. Some of the committeemen, party workers of long standing, considered Hannegan a comparative newcomer.

Dickmann a "Newcomer."

Dickmann is a newcomer, too, the committee members say, as he did not enter the political scene until 1930, when he headed a Citizens' Democratic Committee to select candidates for local office. He also served as treasurer of the Democratic State Committee from 1932 until his election in 1933.

Some committee members feel also that the Mayor did not properly reward the party workers, and that he was "too hard to see" when they called at his office.

Recorder English, the new chairman, believes, as does Jimmy Miller, Fourth Ward boss, that the trouble started with Hannegan's speech. English had a candidate for Alderman of the Twenty-fourth Ward, who was forced to give way to Alderman Arthur E. Pahl, the Mayor's candidate.

Hunt Makes Complaint.

Charles J. Hunt, deputy clerk of the city courts and Twenty-sixth Ward committeeman, who was dismissed by the Mayor after voting against Hannegan, complained of mayoral interference in the aldermanic contests.

"Last March," said Hunt, "Mr. Dickmann forced upon the Democrats of the Twenty-sixth Ward a candidate for the Board of Aldermen, Leroy Couplin, son-in-law of Henry W. Kiel, former Republican Mayor. Couplin was scarcely known and had been a resident of the city only a few years. There were worthy and capable Democrats in the ward who aspired to the office, and who had spent time and money to elect Mr. Dickmann Mayor.

"This was a bitter pill to swallow, but the ward organization accepted Couplin for the sake of party harmony.

"When Mr. Dickmann attempted to compel me to vote to retain Mr. Hannegan as chairman, I refused, for the reason that I was duly elected to the committee by the Democratic voters of my ward and I am responsible to them, and not to Mr. Dickmann. Because I refused to become a sycophant and a

RIVER ABOVE ALTON ABOUT AT DAM LEVEL

Has Fallen to Point That Forms Pool Size It Will Be in Future.

Falling away from its flood, the Mississippi River has dropped above Alton virtually to the level which it will have after construction of the Government dam at Alton. Its present condition corresponded to the prospective appearance of the pool after the dam's completion.

Stages at Alton and Grafton today were 24.5 feet and 17.1 feet, respectively, or 3.5 feet above flood mark at Alton and 9 of a foot below at Grafton. Capt. B. M. Harlow, district army river engineer, said the future pool level would be about one foot lower at Alton and 7 of a foot lower at Grafton. The outlines of the stream have checked closely with the shore lines indicated by surveys before the river rose, he declared.

The pool will extend up the Mississippi to Cape Au Gris, below Elberry, Mo., and up the Illinois River to Kampsville, Ill. It will inundate about 11,000 acres, principally in St. Charles County, between Alton and Portage des Sioux. The maximum width of the pool will be about one and one-third miles, between Alton and West Alton—a widening of about a mile.

MAN IN WRECK SHOTS SELF, WOMAN COMPANION KILLED

Unidentified Motorists Were Using Car That Figured Earlier in Houston Holdup.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 14. — A young woman with red bobbed hair is dead and a young man is unconscious and at the point of death in a hospital here after a wreck on the Conroe road at the Spring Creek Bridge early today. The girl was fatally injured and the man shot himself while passing motorists were trying to extricate the still living woman from the wrecked automobile.

The crash occurred at 12:55 a. m., three hours after the same car containing a man and a woman, figured in a Houston holdup. Papers found in the man's pocket bore the name of Robert A. Reid, Fort Worth. Officers are attempting to identify the two.

Your car will run better with this marvelous

SUMMER GASOLINE

If you are an experienced and observant driver, you can prove for yourself the hot-weather benefits of Phillips 66 . . . the gasoline that is 100% custom-tailored.

Get a trial tankful and you quickly feel the difference . . . your engine feels it . . . but your pocketbook doesn't! . . . because Phillips 66 costs nothing extra.

Phillips was first to match gasoline to weather. Pioneered CONTROLLED VOLATILITY 9 years ago. This scientific development squarely meets the issue of summer motor troubles—overheating, knocking, and lost power. Meets it just as effectively as it does winter driving problems—slow starting, stalling, and lost mileage.

Every month in the year, Phillips gives you a gas custom-tailored to your locality and its temperature, as determined by U. S. Weather Bureau standards. It is definitely engineered to meet your requirements. It is not only a summer gasoline . . . this month it is actually a June gas. And next month it will be a July gas. As different every month as the weather differs from month to month.

That is why changes in climate cannot affect the power, pep, and mileage you get with Phillips 66.

Remember, it doesn't take weeks or months to uncover the facts. Try just a single tankful, and you may find that your car is a much better performer than you ever thought . . . that the engine is smoother, cooler, quieter . . . more responsive to the throttle and far more nimble.

CHOCOLATE FLAVOR IS PERENNIAL FAVORITE

Delicious Drinks and Sauces
Good Now That Summer Is Coming.

Of all flavors, chocolate seems to retain a perennial favoritism, a flavor that may be shelved for a week or two, then brought out and greeted with family enthusiasm. Chocolate drinks have always been children's favorites. The child who refuses milk as such will very often be completely won over with a chocolate combination made with chocolate syrup. For grown-ups the addition of mint makes a summer drink that has few equals.

Now that the ice cream season is drawing nigh chocolate sauces to dress a plain dish are going to be much in demand. A simple chocolate sauce will give a party aspect to the plainest dessert.

Chocolate Milk Shake.
Few sprigs mint
Three cups evaporated milk
Three cups water
Three-fourths cup cocoa syrup or chocolate sauce

Crush the mint leaves, add remaining ingredients and shake vigorously with chilled ice. Mint extract may be used if fresh mint is not available. Yield: six servings.

Cocoa Syrup.
One-half cup cocoa
One-half cup sugar
Few grains salt
Two cups boiling water

Mix cocoa, sugar and salt. Add boiling water slowly, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil and boil five minutes. Store in a covered jar in a cool place. Yield: two cups.

Chocolate Sauce.
Three squares bitter chocolate
One-fourth cup water
One cup sugar
One-half cup white corn syrup
One cup irradiated evaporated milk

One teaspoon vanilla
Melt chocolate over hot water. Add water slowly, stirring until smooth. Add sugar and syrup. Boil to soft ball stage (235 degrees Fahrenheit). Remove from fire, add milk and vanilla. Yield: two and one-half cups.

Here is a chocolate milk shake made with crushed ice.
Chocolate Milk Shake.
One-fourth cup crushed ice
Two tablespoons chocolate syrup
One-half cup milk
One-fourth cup seltzer or soda water

Put all the ingredients into a shaker and shake until well mixed. Serve either plain or with whipped cream.

Another chocolate summer drink that you may want to serve in place of iced tea or coffee is made with chocolate.

Iced Chocolate.
Two squares bitter chocolate.
Two-thirds cup sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One cup boiling water.

Three cups iced milk.
Melt the chocolate over boiling water. Add sugar, salt and boiling water and stir until it boils. Cook for five minutes, then set aside to cool. Chill in icebox and when ready to serve add the iced milk. One or two tablespoons vanilla ice cream added to each glassful makes a real party drink for children.

A LARGE CHEESE CAKE FOR THE INFORMAL PORCH OR GARDEN SUPPER

We've got a weakness for cheese cake and it seems to us that this large cake is just the kind of dessert that at an informal supper of the porch or backyard garden variety. This one is large enough to serve 12.

Cheese Cake.
Three egg yolks slightly beaten.
One-half cup sugar.
One-half cup water.
Two tablespoons plain gelatine.
One-half cup cold water.
One pound sieved cottage cheese.
Juice and grated rind of one lemon.

One-quarter teaspoon salt.
Three egg whites beaten stiff.
One cup whipped cream.
Beat the egg yolks and sugar together and add one-half cup water. Cook over hot water for three minutes. Sprinkle the gelatine on the cold water and when softened add to the hot egg and sugar mixture. Stir until dissolved. Add the sieved cottage cheese, lemon juice, rind and salt and when cool add the beaten egg whites and cream. Make a crumb crust of two cups graham cracker or zwieback crumbs, one-half cup butter, one tablespoon cinnamon and four tablespoons sugar. Pat half the mixture into a torte pan or spring form. Fill the pan with the cheese mixture and sprinkle the remaining crumbs over the top. Place in a refrigerator for one hour.

CHERRY MOUSSE
One-fourth cup cherry juice, scalded.
One tablespoon gelatin.
One-fourth cup cold water.
One cup pitted cherries.
Five tablespoons sugar.
Two cups whipping cream.

Soak the gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Bring the cherries to a boil, then press them through a sieve. Let the cherry pulp cool, then stir it into the gelatin mixture and add the sugar, stirring until dissolved. Whip the cream until stiff and fold into the cherry mixture. Turn into refrigerator to set and freeze for three to four hours.

RECIPE FOR MOUSSE CALLS FOR STRAWBERRY JAM

When you have that craving for a strawberry dessert and there are no strawberries in sight, don't be deterred. Here is a recipe for a mousse that calls for strawberry jam.

Strawberry Mousse.
One cup strawberry jam.
One egg white, unbeaten.
Dash of salt.
One-fourth cup milk.
Three-fourths cup heavy cream.
Beat jam until soft and smooth.

Combine egg white, salt, milk and cream and beat with a rotary egg beater until stiff. Add jam and mix well. Turn into a mold, cover top with waxed paper, press the cover down tightly over the paper and pack in equal parts of ice and salt. Let stand four hours before serving. If the freezing trays in the refrigerator, or are used, the same amount of time is necessary. This recipe makes one quart of mousse.

Romaine and Endive Salad.
Separate leaves of romaine and endive, wash thoroughly and put in ice water to become crisp. Lay three or four stalks of endive lengthwise on a leaf of romaine. Garnish with strips of red or green pepper and serve with French dressing. For a more hearty salad, mix equal quantities of chopped celery and chopped green pepper with a little mayonnaise to hold them together. Fill the stalks of endive with this mixture and lay on the romaine leaves. This may be served with French dressing or any other desired variation.

Do not shell peas too long in advance of cooking. It kills their flavor.

SAVORY SAUSAGES A TASTY QUICK MEAL

Served as Picnic Meal Under Trees or in Dining Room They Are a Boon.

Quick meals and the summer season seem to go hand in hand. Whether the meal is a picnic out somewhere under the trees, in your own back yard or served decorously from the dining-room table, a quick meal is a boon to the housewife.

Food that takes a minimum of preparation is always in demand and sausages seem to fill the bill. Fry them, broil them or combine them with other foods and make one dish meals of them, they are always good.

For Picnic.
A picnic is not a picnic unless there are frankfurters, cooked at the end of a stick or cooking fork or cooked wholesale in a steak broiler or over a wire grate. If a frying pan and grill are used, be sure that there is a bit of fat in the pan. Fry the frankfurters rather slowly until they are nicely browned. If you like you may boil them first and then brown them in the pan.

For the picnic or for home consumption the procedure is quite the same when it comes to cooking. At home a number of interesting combinations may be arrived at, thus adding more one-dish meals to the list of achievements.

Savory Frankfurters.
One pound frankfurters.
One-fourth cup celery, diced.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-half cup tomato catsup.
Two tablespoons fat.
Creamed potatoes.
Add a small amount of water to the pan with the frankfurters. Bring to a boil. Remove frankfurters to a serving dish; add fat to pan, and brown the celery; add catsup, salt and some pepper, and pour this sauce over the frankfurters; surround all with creamed potatoes, and sprinkle chopped parsley over the top.

Frankfurter Corn Pudding.
One pound frankfurters.
Two eggs.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Season the corn and add the slightly beaten eggs. Place in a greased baking dish and cover the top with frankfurters. Place covered dish in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and cook for 25 minutes.

variation: Well-seasoned mashed or creamed potatoes may be used in the casserole in place of the cooked corn.
Baked Frankfurters with Sauerkraut.
Partially fill a casserole with sauerkraut, and add a layer of frankfurters and then another layer of sauerkraut. Cover casserole and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Fruit Juices Important In Diet of Growing Child

Orange and Tomato Juice Both Rich in Vitamin C Necessary to Prevent Scurvy.

When a doctor sees, in a child's hospital within four months' time, 17 babies seriously ill with scurvy, he knows that something is very wrong in that community. Seven cases of scurvy are bad enough in themselves, but for each case that comes to the hospital, there are sure to be many other ill babies outside, with nobody knowing just what is the matter with them.

This happened recently in one of our big cities. It happened because the babies had not had the right food. Probably the same thing is happening in other places where many people have been out of work for a long time and their families have been on short rations. It can happen, however, where there is plenty of all kinds of food except vegetables and fruits, where people do not choose to eat enough vegetables and fruits. This is true for babies that have plenty of milk and cod-liver oil and cereal but no orange or tomato juice.

Lack of Vitamin C. Scurvy is due to the lack of one particular food substance, vitamin C, which we get chiefly from vegetables and fruits. Adults who eat plenty of vegetables and fruits do not have scurvy. Nor do babies that have orange juice or tomato juice every day. Anybody, however, who goes for a long time without such foods or with not enough of them, will sooner or later show symptoms of scurvy. It may be mild at first, but gradually, as time goes on and vitamin C foods are still lacking, the disease becomes acute.

So the baby's orange juice, or tomato juice, is by no means just a fad or new-fangled notion. It is true our parents and grandparents, perhaps we ourselves, never had orange juice when we were babies. Oranges were too scarce. They came at Christmas time, for good children only, out of Santa Claus' pack. As for tomatoes, some people thought they were poison! Nobody thought these foods were necessary for babies then.

Fruit Juice Needed. Times have changed, especially for the babies. The United States Children's Bureau, in its directions for infants' care, advises a regular feeding of orange juice or tomato juice for the baby every day, beginning when he is a month old. This in addition to his milk and cod-liver oil. It is a safeguard against scurvy.

But why do we say this now, when babies used to get along without any orange or tomato juice? Nutritionists will tell you that babies who live on their mothers' milk are not likely to have scurvy. This is true for two reasons: The mother's milk contains vitamin C. If the mother has plenty of vegetables and fruits to eat, and the baby gets the milk before any vitamin value can be lost. But many babies nowadays do not live entirely on their mother's milk. And in times of unemployment and scarcity of money or food, many mothers do not have the vegetables and fruits they need to make their milk rich in vitamin C.

Little Vitamin C. Bottle-fed babies do not get much vitamin C from the cow's milk that is in their bottles. Cow's milk when fresh from the cow does contain vitamin C, provided the cow is well-fed, but much of the vitamin C is lost before the milk can be delivered at your door. Cow's milk is usually pasteurized for the baby's use, in order to kill any harmful bacteria it may contain, bacteria which might cause tuberculosis, or diphtheria or some other infectious disease. To pasteurize milk you heat it. This heating destroys vitamin C.

For the bottle-fed baby, then, his milk must be pasteurized to protect him from infectious diseases, even though this process destroys the vitamin C in milk, for there are other foods that furnish vitamin C. Orange juice and tomato juice are the best of such foods because they are rich in vitamin C. The baby can take them better than he can take the vegetables and fruits his parents and the older children may use, such vegetables as cabbage, green peppers and greens of all kinds, and fruits such as apples, peaches and berries.

Economical and Convenient. For the baby, in fact, orange juice and tomato juice are probably the most economical and convenient sources of vitamin C as well as the richest. The baby needs so little, a teaspoon of strained orange juice twice a day, by the end of his first month, then two teaspoons, then a tablespoon twice a day by his third month. Of tomato juice, you give him about twice as much each time.

It is true that the babies' fruit juices cost a little more than their cereal, and more, in proportion, than their milk. But they do not cost much at that, and few mothers would fail to provide them somehow if only they realized how important they are.

To quote one doctor, some mothers "think of the fruit juices as a nice thing for the baby if they can be readily afforded, but not as a real necessity." To provide orange juice for the baby alone, you need two or three oranges a week, depending on the size and juiciness of the fruit. To squeeze the orange and let the juice stand, however, it loses vitamin C that gradually to water, then add raisins, and bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place immediately over rapidly boiling water and cook five minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from boiling water—mixture clears and thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, add coffee and vanilla. Chill; fold in cream. Serve in sherbet glasses. Serves six.

Pongee should be thoroughly dry before ironing. Ironing when damp makes it stiff and dark.

To all the family: Make sure first of the protective foods, especially for the children, and then buy the other foods you need. If that rule is followed, the baby will get his milk and his fruit juice, the older children and the rest of the family will get theirs, too.

Children should have tomatoes or oranges or the juice every day. As soon as they can take it, give them, every day, a green or yellow vegetable and some other fruit or vegetable besides. These are not all the foods they need, of course, but they are the ones they are most likely not to get unless somebody sees to it before the other, usually cheaper foods are bought.

Sautéing is cooking food on a griddle or skillet with just enough fat to cover the surface of the cooking vessel.

A DELICIOUS GERMAN CAKE REQUIRES MUCH BUTTER

Tortes are perhaps the best expression of German cake baking that has come to America. Of course, they demand a great deal of butter and eggs but they are so good that we recommend a luxury of this sort at intervals.

Heavenly Torte.
Three-fourths pound butter.
Four egg yolks.
Four tablespoons sugar.
Rind of one lemon, grated.
Four cups flour.
One-half teaspoon baking powder.
Cream the butter and sugar and add the beaten egg yolks. Beat for about 15 minutes. Then add the lemon rind and the flour and baking powder which have been sifted together. Pour into three greased tins. Brush each layer with beaten egg white and cover two layers with a mixture of one cup powdered sugar, one cup chopped almonds and a little cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven for 20 minutes. When cool put together with a filling made of one pint sour cream which has been brought to a boil. Add one cup sugar, vanilla to taste, juice of one lemon, three tablespoons flour and two egg yolks.

Sprinkle powdered sugar over the top of cake. May also be put together with the beaten and sweetened egg whites and sprinkled with coarsely chopped almonds.

Cheese Sticks.
Cut stale bread into desired lengths, spread with butter and grated cheese, then dust with paprika and brown in the oven until the cheese is melted.

COFFEE CARNIVAL

One and one-half cups water.
One-third cup tapioca.
One-half cup sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-third cup seedless raisins.
One cup strong coffee.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One cup cream, whipped.
Place water in top of double boiler and bring to a boil over direct heat. Combine dry ingredients; add way. To make one orange go as far as possible for the baby, cut a small piece off one end and squeeze the juice from that end-piece for one feeding, then turn the cut surface of the orange into a plate or saucer and set it in a cool place until the baby's next feeding time. Then cut off another small piece of the orange, squeeze out of it another spoonful or two of juice, as required, and again turn the cut surface of the orange into the plate to keep for the next feeding—and so on.

Tomato Juice.
Tomatoes, fresh or canned, may be used for the baby's tomato juice. Strain off your portion of the juice when you open the can, and keep it closely covered in the coolest place you have.

All this brings us back to the nutritionists' advice to mothers and housewives, and intended to apply to all the family: Make sure first of the protective foods, especially for the children, and then buy the other foods you need. If that rule is followed, the baby will get his milk and his fruit juice, the older children and the rest of the family will get theirs, too.

Children should have tomatoes or oranges or the juice every day. As soon as they can take it, give them, every day, a green or yellow vegetable and some other fruit or vegetable besides. These are not all the foods they need, of course, but they are the ones they are most likely not to get unless somebody sees to it before the other, usually cheaper foods are bought.

Sautéing is cooking food on a griddle or skillet with just enough fat to cover the surface of the cooking vessel.

Chocolate Pepper Mint Cake.
Sift together two cups flour, one teaspoon soda and one-half teaspoon salt. Cream together one-third cup butter or shortening, add gradually one and one-fourth cups sugar. Add one whole egg and beat thoroughly. Melt three squares of unsweetened chocolate and add to the mixture and beat in about one-fourth the flour mixture. Now add one-half cup thick cream and the remaining flour alternately with three-fourths cup milk, beating well after each addition. Flavor with one teaspoon vanilla and bake in two greased layer pans in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes. Frost with peppermint frosting.

Peppermint Frosting.
Combine two unbeaten egg whites, one and one-half cups sugar, five tablespoons water and one and one-half tablespoons syrup in a two-cup double boiler. Place over boiling water and cook for seven minutes, heating all the while with a rotary egg beater until the frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from water and add six to ten drops of oil of peppermint. Beat until thick enough to spread, and cover cake.

Fresh Peach Mousse.
Peel and dice enough fresh peaches to make one cup and add one-half cup sugar. Soften one teaspoon gelatin in two tablespoons cold water and dissolve in three tablespoons boiling water. Add a few grains of salt and put with diced peach pulp and sugar. Turn into freezing trays and chill until mixture thickens. Then add one cup heavy cream beaten stiff and flavored with a few drops of almond extract. Fold in the cream and freeze until stiff.

Hot Cherry Tart.
Line muffin tins with pastry and bake. When done, move and fill with the following cherry mixture. Cook two cups pitted cherries in one cup hot water and one cup of sugar for 10 minutes. Blend one tablespoon cornstarch to a paste with a little cold water and add to the hot liquid from which the cherries have been drained. Cook until thickened, stirring all the while. Return cherries to the thickened mixture and fill tart shells. Garnish with a little whipped cream and serve hot. Serves eight.

Lemon Chiffon Pie.
Beat four egg yolks slightly, add three-fourths cup sugar and one-fourth teaspoon salt and beat over boiling water. Sprinkle one tablespoon gelatin on one-fourth cup cold water. Cook egg yolks until thick and add softened gelatin and one teaspoon grated lemon rind. Set aside to cool. Beat the four egg whites until stiff and add one-fourth cup sugar. Fold the custard into the beaten egg whites and fill into a baked pie shell. Chill in a refrigerator. Serve with a thin layer of whipped cream which may be spread on the pie when it is put in the icebox.

Cream Sponge Cake.
Cook together one cup sugar and one-half cup water until it threads. Beat five egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add sugar syrup, grated rind and juice of one lemon and beat until the mixture is cold. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold in one and one-eighth cups flour. Fold in the egg and sugar mixture last and bake in an angel cake pan in a slow oven for 40 to 50 minutes. Temperature (220 to 250 degrees).

TART TOMATO SALAD

One package lemon flavored gelatin.
One pint stewed tomatoes, strained.
One and one-half teaspoons lemon juice.
Dash of salt.
One teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
One-half cup celery, diced.
One-half cup sweet pickles, or ripe cucumber pickles, diced.
Dissolve gelatin in boiling tomato juice. Add lemon juice, salt and Worcestershire sauce. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in celery and pickles. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves eight.

NUT TRIFLE

One-half cup sugar.
One-half cup brown sugar.
Two cups syrup.
Vanilla ice cream.
One-half teaspoon vanilla.
One-half cup cold water.
One and one-half tablespoons butter.

Pecans.
Cook white and brown sugar, syrup and cold water together until a little dropped in cold water becomes brittle. Remove from fire, beat in butter, hot water and vanilla. Make a "sandwich" of sponge cake and ice cream, top with hot sauce and pecans.

A Tidy Sewing Kit.
Snap a small rubber band around your darning cotton balls if you want to keep your sewing basket more tidy.

A LITTLE CHAT ABOUT MARKETS AND MENUS

Its Open Season for Fresh Fish—Homegrown Beans and Broccoli in Markets.

This may not be the lenten season but fresh fish is so plentiful just now that we can't help mentioning it. The small fish, usually called pan fish which one estimates at one per person are excellent just now with crappie and silver bass coming on the market. For company dinner the red snapper stuffed and baked or broiled, the haddock and mackerel are good suggestions.

Frog legs, in season now, are in the luxury class—as are fresh shrimp. It is a good idea, too, to take advantage of fresh halibut steaks which may be baked or pan fried. This happens to be the season, too, for lake trout around which a delightful company dinner can be planned. If you want a real Southern meal or if you want to make the real Southern bouillabaisse pompano is the thing.

Home-grown Vegetables. Vegetables continue to come into the markets in spite of cold and rain. String beans are home-grown, with beets, cauliflower and cabbage excellent. Broccoli, too, has joined the home-grown class. Corn is good now and the golden bantam that most people prize is coming into the market.

If you want to get your quota of sunshine vitamins serve butter lettuce, also known as Boston head lettuce and field lettuce. It, like the romaine, is quite tender now and can be used down to the last leaf.

Berries continue with raspberries more reasonably priced and dewberries no higher than strawberries. The latter are having a rather short season due to all the rain and it is feared that there won't be much strawberry jelly and jam in the home fruit closet this winter.

Fresh Cherries. Honey ball are new in the melon class. Black cherries from California are coming in and home-grown cherries are beginning to make a good showing. Greengage plums are quite high. Home-grown rhubarb is still in evidence though the stalks have grown heavy. Peaches are still coming in from Georgia and are the freestone kind. Sizeable Persian limes for those cooling drinks, fresh limes and burbank potatoes are coming in from California.

Tomatoes are good now with hot-house tomatoes selling at extraordinarily reasonable prices. Lemons, too, are anticipating the warmer weather and are quite low in price.

Off Season for Lamb. Lamb is high, due more or less to the off season. Beef has dropped in the past week and veal remains steady.

Sunday's dinner is a chicken dinner. There will be enough left over if the fowl is at all sizeable for Monday evening's chicken patties. Since peaches are still in the luxury class we suggested fresh peach ice cream for dessert.

It is a good idea to take advantage of the berries in the market. Serve them with ready cereal and use them as dessert either alone with sugar or cream or with fresh cubes or pineapple.

Salads and vegetables are beginning to carry the greater weight of our dinners. Cold cuts are always good but it is wise to remember, in serving iced drinks that these lower the body temperature only momentarily. It is a good idea to begin cutting down on the heat creating foods, butterfats, cream gravies, rich desserts and heavy meats.

A New Salad Dressing. If you want a salad dressing that is slightly different try adding some sherry. Use lemon juice, oil, powdered sugar and just a touch of salt and mix well. This is excellent for fruit salads.

TRANSIENT SAVES TRAMMEN

TRAPPED IN FREIGHT WRECK

Thomas Whitney, 28, Gets New Suit and Ride on "Cushions" for Act of Heroism.

By the Associated Press.

THUNDER FORKS, Mont., June 14.—Thomas Whitney, 28-year-old transient, "rode the cushions," a term as he resumed his homeward trip to Chicago yesterday, which had been interrupted by a freight train wreck. For saving the lives of two transients, railroad officials gave him a new suit, free transportation to Chicago and unstinted passage.

A train from a Northern Pacific freight train rolled off a flood-undermined trestle into overflow waters of the Jefferson River, near

Thunder Forks, Mont., and dislodged

Whitney found that Fireman William

Kramer and Head Brakeman

Marion Johnson were trapped by mud and water in the locomotive

cab. Whitney could find no tools, but with his bare hands dug furiously in the mud and cold water until he pulled out the imprisoned transients. His fingers were raw and bleeding as he completed the task.

The locomotive, built at a cost of $120,000, was making its trial run when it was derailed.

PETITIONS TO REORGANIZE

Belleville Concern Files Action Under Federal Bankruptcy Act.

A petition for corporate reorganization under the terms of the Federal Bankruptcy Act was filed in Federal Court in East St. Louis yesterday by the Star-Peerless Brewery, Belleville.

Saying that the company is solvent and has no means of borrow-products, the petition says that reorganization is necessary to make property available and continue operations. Assets and liabilities were valued at $500,000.

The petition stated that the company was founded during the first few months of this year. It is signed by C. J. Adams, president.

STOCKS AND BONDS ARE PUT INTO PRICES RISE

Explanation Given for Improvement in Market Following Profit Taking in Early Period.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 14.—Investment demand was again the dominant force in today's stock market and many issues were pushed up to new highs for the year or longer with gains of fractions to around three points. The rails, communications and "blue chip" specialties were the leaders. The close was firm. Transfers approximated 1,300,000 shares.

Strength of the carriers was one of the most encouraging signs to bulls. Sentiment was also aided by announcement that the United States at the personal request of President Roosevelt had agreed to recommend postponement of the coal strike which had been called for Monday.

Other Washington influences such as the quick adoption by the House of the Senate's "stop-gap" bill amendments apparently were not considered exceptional market motivators. Buying of equities was attributed largely to the plethora of idle funds seeking employment.

Gains were revived by a brisk rally in wheat. Cotton also improved after early hesitation. Low-priced loans kept the bond department optimistic. Gold currencies were a trifle better in foreign exchange dealings.

Shares pushed ahead after a dull start which accompanied profit-taking. While there was no realizing near the finish Western Union was up about 3, and others, major fractions to around 2 higher, included Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, Northern Pacific, U. S. Smelter, International Telephone, Consolidated Gas, du Pont, Case, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Westinghouse, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Evans Products and Inland Steel.

The 5 and 6 per cent preferred stocks of American Power & Light dropped more than 3 points each following omission of dividends by the company's directors.

Franc Firmers Late.
Wheat closed 1 to 1 1/2 cents a bushel higher and corn 1/2 off to 1 1/2 advanced. Cattle were up to 15. Cotton ended with gains of 50 to 65 cents a bale. Imported bar silver at New York was raised 1/2 of a cent an ounce to 72 1/2 cents.

In late dealings sterling was 1/4 of a cent lower at $4.94, and the French franc 3/16 of a cent firmer at 65 1/2 cents. Belas, Swiss francs and guilders were up .01 to .03 of a cent. Canadian dollars firmed 1-32 of a cent at 99.87 1/2.

News of the Day.
Some hope that the threatened humbug act strike called off for Monday, might be averted was seen in advices from the capital that President Roosevelt had summoned mine leaders to a conference to discuss the proposed Guffey bill for regulation of the coal fields.

Freight car loadings for the week ended June 8 registered a substantial increase over the total for the previous period, largely owing to heavy shipments of coal in anticipation of the strike.

Weekly Summaries.
"Helped by the higher temperatures," said Dun & Bradstreet, "retail sales broadened at the quickest rate experienced since the Easter shopping season."

The summary added, however, that "although reports from all of the leading centers of distribution pointed out the expansion in consumer demand thus far in June from the unsatisfactory showing of May, the estimated gain in retail sales for the country as a whole was not more than 3 to 8 per cent over the comparative totals of a year ago when the prevalence of summer temperatures was general."

The weekly report of the Federal Reserve system as of Wednesday, disclosed that member bank reserves had risen to a new high record at $5,949,000,000. A rise of $100,000,000 in the country's gold stocks to an historical peak of $916,000,000 was also noted.

Day's Most Active Stocks.
Closing price and net change of the 15 most active stocks: Chrysler, 49 1/2, up 1 1/2; Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing, 51 1/2, up 2 1/2; Great Northern Railway, 17 1/2, up 1 1/2; General Motors, 31 1/2, up 1/2; Southern Pacific, 18 1/2, up 1/2; Western Union, 34 1/2, up 3/4; Atchafalaya, 46 1/2, up 1/2; United Aircraft, 13 1/2, unchanged; Briggs Manufacturing, 30 1/2, up 1/2; General Electric, 26 1/2, up 1/2; Standard Brands, 15 1/2, up 1/2; Radio, 35 1/2, up 1/2; Chicago & Northwestern, 21 1/2, down 1/2.

By the Associated Press.

Dun-Bradstreet Weekly Tabloid Business Review

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 14.—The Dun-Bradstreet Weekly Tabloid Business Review for the week ending June 14, 1935, shows a general upward trend in business activity across most sectors. The review highlights significant increases in manufacturing output, particularly in the automotive and machinery industries, which are attributed to improved demand and favorable weather conditions. Retail sales are also showing signs of recovery, with a notable uptick in consumer spending on durable goods. However, the review also notes some challenges in the agricultural sector, where weather-related issues have impacted production levels. Overall, the outlook for the second half of 1935 appears optimistic, with continued growth expected in key economic sectors.

BRITAIN, GERMANY AGREE ON TERMS OF NAVAL TREATY

Agreement Would Restrict Reich in Each Category to 35 Pct. of British Under-Age Vessels.

HITLER'S APPROVAL GIVEN AT LONDON

Bilateral Pact to Apply Regardless of Whether France and Italy Accept Proposal.

LONDON, June 14.—High British sources today confirmed reports of an agreement between Great Britain and Germany on terms of a bilateral treaty restricting the German navy to 35 per cent of the underlying British naval strength.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's assent to the terms was formally communicated this morning to Sir Samuel Hoare, British Foreign Secretary, at a conference with Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's armaments expert.

Some naval authorities asserted that under these terms the German navy would actually be only 17 per cent the size of the British navy at present, in view of the great proportion of over-age vessels in the British fleet.

It was understood, however, that the treaty contemplates the replacement of Great Britain's over-age ships within the limits pre- scribed by the Washington and London naval treaties.

Provisions of Accord.

An important aspect of the agreement is, it was indicated, that it will be operative between the two countries regardless of whether it is accepted by France and Italy. The United States and Japan raised no objections, but replies still are awaited from Paris and Rome.

If other powers enter a navy-building competition and exceed the limits contemplated under the present treaties, both England and Germany would be released from their mutual agreement.

Although France and Italy are not bound by treaties except in the building of capital ships, it is understood that a release clause in the British-German agreement has been framed to protect Germany against the event of a naval armament race in smaller warships and submarines.

The British Government still is hopeful that the bilateral agreement can be incorporated into a multilateral pact including Russia, the decision to reject the present Treaty of Versailles was defended by the London Times, in an apparently inspired editorial.

"Although in practice it (the agreement) involves a tacit disregard of the Treaty of Versailles," the editorial said, "yet inasmuch as it will substitute a new agreement for the prosecution of disarmament clauses of the treaty, it will constitute an important advance in the process of getting peace established upon the firm ground of agreement."

There are parts of the Treaty of Versailles which it is best to "forget about," the editorial said.

Von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador at London, and his staff returned yesterday from Munich for the resumption of the conference, interrupted by Whitsunday.

13 NAZI SOLDIERS DIE AT DRILL

13 Others, Mostly Recruits, Collapse From Sunstroke.

REHNSBURG, Germany, June 14.—The German Army command was forced to call off maneuvers here after five soldiers died and 13 suffered sunstroke, it was learned today.

The soldiers, mostly recruits, marched in maneuvers Tuesday. The news of the fatalities was suppressed. The heat, 117 degrees Fahrenheit, was said to have caused the sudden collapse of many of the untrained men.

Food Shortage in Turkey.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, June 14.—The Government forbade further export of cereals yesterday and is now checking speculation as the result of a food shortage due to crop failure.

FIGHTING STOPS IN CHACO; MEDIATION EFFORTS START

First Step Is Ratification of Peace Protocol by the Congresses of Paraguay and Bolivia.

By the Associated Press.
BUENOS AIRES, June 14.—A 10-day truce took effect in the Chaco at noon today, the Bolivian and Paraguayan general staffs issuing the cease firing order to weary soldiers whose hostilities had virtually halted several hours before.

Word of the signing of the peace protocol here this week reached the battle lines Wednesday and yesterday, and all sectors were quiet overnight and this morning.

With the end of three years of fighting, which cost about 100,000 men died, the peace machinery constructed by representatives of six neutral American nations begins operation.

First step is ratification of the protocol by Congresses of the belligerents. A formal 12-day truce thereupon begins, during which the mediators and the belligerents will discuss demobilization and demilitarization of the disputed zone.

A neutral military commission, on which Capt. Frederick Sharp, military attaché here, represents the United States, is at the front to oversee suspension of hostilities.

The newspaper Noticias Graficas says Bolivian soldiers, learning a peace accord had been signed, abandoned their posts and deposited civil authorities in the town of Tarija.

"In interior Bolivia extraordinary excitement exists," says a dispatch. "Officers published proclamations against politicians and the military commands, stating it was necessary to judge them for the war. In Villazon the situation is grave."

A dispatch to the same newspaper from Cordoba, Argentina, says it is rumored there that Bolivian Leftists in exile are planning to cross the frontier into Bolivia and start a revolution.

The Bolivian legation here issued a communique stating that the United States had received a telegram from the Government at La Paz declaring the reports baseless.

CURRENCY CONTROL FUND PROPOSED BY CANADIAN PREMIER

Bill Offered in House to Use Profits on Gold for Operations.

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 14.—Premier Bennett introduced in the House of Commons yesterday a bill to establish an exchange fund.

Use would be made of profits accruing to the Government from the increased value of the gold taken over by the Bank of Canada from chartered banks to create the fund, Bennett said. The Bank of Canada Act providing that this profit be paid into the consolidated revenue fund of the Dominion.

Under the proposed act this surplus would be placed in a special fund in the name of the Minister of Finance to be used as occasion arose "to aid in the control and protection of the external value of the Canadian monetary unit."

For the purpose of endeavoring to control external value of the national monetary unit, or of checking undue fluctuations in its exchange value, the Minister may directly, or through such agencies as he may designate, cause any balances in the special account to be invested in gold, foreign exchanges as defined in the Bank of Canada Act, or balances with any bank in London or New York he may designate, the bill says.

Stricter control will be maintained in the operation of the account. A fine of $1000 and six months' imprisonment is the penalty for disclosure of such information to any person not legally entitled to it.

BANKING BILL REVISION MADE

Glass Sub-committee Sets Time Limit on Joining Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Glass Banking Sub-committee completed its revision of deposit insurance provisions of the administration banking bill yesterday by inserting a section requiring all State banks with a capital of $1,000,000 or more to join the Federal Reserve System by July 1, 1937, in order to retain Federal insurance.

Sharply divided over sections of the measure placing currency and credit control in the Reserve Board, the committee will meet tomorrow to decide whether to consider these provisions now or sidetrack them. Chairman Glass (Dem.), Virginia, is leading the fight to eliminate this section but other members forecast his defeat.

QUEEN MARY AT COURT BALL

King George Reported Recovering at Sandringham; 2000 Guests.

LONDON, June 14.—Queen Mary, wearing a gown of pink lace and the famed Kohinoor among the diamonds that adorned her, sat alone on a golden throne at the end of the long white and gold ballroom in Buckingham Palace last night as 2000 guests danced at the second court ball of the jubilee year. The Prince of Wales escorted the Queen into the ballroom and took his place in the royal circle.

King George was at Sandringham, where he was reported recovering from an attack of bronchial catarrh. The King took another automobile drive over the royal estate and his physicians reported he was showing satisfactory improvement.

PLANES COLLIDE, FOUR KILLED

Pilots Fall With Burning Machines; House Hit in Rumania.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 14.—Four persons were killed yesterday when two military planes crashed head-on while flying at high speed.

The pilots fell with their burning machines and demolished it. Two observers cleared the planes with parachutes but were killed in landing.

FRANCE DEFAULTS AGAIN, HOPES FOR WAR DEBT TALK

Laval Ready to Reopen Negotiations When Situation Permits, He Says in Note to U. S.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, June 14.—France, in defaulting its war debt payment to the United States for the sixth time today, expressed hope "the situation in the near future would justify" negotiations for a settlement. A payment of $64,367,137 is due tomorrow.

Premier Pierre Laval's note of default was approved by the Council of Ministers today, after it had been cabled to the Washington Embassy last night for delivery to the State Department tomorrow.

The note, which the United States for the renewed suggestion in the American "statement of account" that France submit a proposal for payment.

The French Government, it added, "wishes for its part to refer to its previous communications and to recall that it is ready to seek a basis of settlement acceptable to both countries as soon as circumstances permit."

"It being impossible to formulate a proposal, which can only hope there will be a satisfactory evolution in the situation such as to justify in the near future the opening of negotiations to discuss the prompt accord for which both countries alike hope." The note was signed by Laval.

Drastic cuts of several billions of francs in Government expenses and the wholesale "return" of foreign workers to their own countries were outlined in the Council of Ministers as methods for protecting the franc.

Laval told his Cabinet that it must try to balance the budget and reduce unemployment. The issuance of decrees, probably July 1, will be the public's first news as to where the financial axe will fall in order to forestall lobbying on the matter.

France $163,616,000 in Arrears Already, Others Default.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—In addition to the $64,367,137 due tomorrow, France already is in arrears $163,616,000 on its war debt to the United States, including $58,904,000 in principal, $96,307,162 in interest and $9,404,639 in deferred annuity payments under the Hoover moratorium. Tomorrow France will owe the United States $227,983,982.

Estonia also has given notice that it will make no payment on an installment of $322,850. That government already is in default $1,844,185.87.

Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, Italy and Rumania already have defaulted on semiannual payments and American officials expect similar action by all of its other debtors except Finland which, following its custom, has notified the State Department it will make payment.

APPEAL FOR HARMONY BY MEXICAN PRESIDENT

Statement Taken as Answer to Calles Criticism of "Policies."

MEXICO, D. F., June 14.—President Lazaro Cardenas, in an effort to halt what he termed "the grave and unjustified agitation" which has disturbed the country for the past few days, today issued a statement urging serenity in solving problems confronting the nation.

Cardenas made no direct reference to the recent declarations of former President Plutarco Elias Calles, interpreted as an implied warning to him, but at the same time made it clear his government stands behind labor in realizing "its just demands."

Mexico's 12 largest labor organizations, resenting Calles' statements, have threatened a general strike as "the only means of defense against the possible implantation of a Fascist regime."

Cardenas deplored political differences referred to by Calles and said it was the first he had heard of them, although he was aware some elements who "failed to obtain positions wanted in the new government, had dedicated themselves with all perseverance to put difficulties into the path of the actual administration."

Cardenas repeated references to himself as "head of the government" and "chief of the nation" were accepted in political circles as an indication that he would insist on following his own policies, regardless of the stand taken by Calles, Mexico's "iron man," who is said to oppose his pro-labor program.

Nine men and three women were brought to the penitentiary here today from Atlixco, Puebla, where they were arrested on charges of purchasing arms and ammunition to be supplied to the Rebel Leader "El Tallarin."

Two priests and two soldiers were among the prisoners. "El Tallarin," who has been operating in the states of Puebla and Tlaxcala, has been victim in clashes with Federal troops for more than eight months, although he was reported to have been wounded in a recent encounter in which his brother was killed.

THOMAS OFFERS NEW OIL CONTROL BILL IN SENATE

Provides for Federal Action, if States, After Advice on Situation, Fail to Act.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 14.—A revised oil bill which Senator Thomas (Dem.), Oklahoma, termed "somewhat milder" than pending legislation, was introduced today in the Senate.

"One important feature of this new bill," Thomas said, "is that the Federal Government can advise states when their crude oil production reaching interstate commerce is too great and should be reduced. Then, if a State, through its own agency, doesn't remedy the situation, the Government can take steps to meet the problem."

The bill would provide ratification of interstate compacts, re-establishment of the now impotent petroleum administrative board, creation of advisory committees from the industry to work with the Federal agencies, Federal approval of orderly development of new oil fields, indefinite extension of the Connally "hot oil" law and transfer of the President's power under that act to the new board.

As the old bill, the board would be authorized to determine the reasonable market for demand for oil in the United States and determine that part which each State might contribute to that total.

ITALY MOBILIZING FOR ABYSSINIAN SERVICE

Mountain gun batteries on parade before leaving Rome for service in Africa, following disturbances on the borders of Italian Somaliland. Abyssinian tribesmen and Italian outposts.

ROME, June 14.—Robert Hodel, Swiss journalist and president of the Foreign Press Association, protested to the Government Press Bureau today against the expulsion of David Darrah, Chicago Tribune correspondent, from Italy yesterday.

Hodel particularly objected to the lack of advance notice given the American newspaper man and said Darrah had been made to go to the railroad station immediately by detectives sent after him. It is likely that the directorate of the Foreign Press Association, composed of foreign correspondents accredited to Italy, will make another and more formal protest, particularly over the fact that the association was not notified of Darrah's expulsion.

Premier Mussolini promised the association some years ago that no correspondent would be expelled without advance notice.

SOVIET MILKMAID CONFESSES SHE WOUNDED 'CHAMPION' COW

Says She Feared Inspector Would Find Out She Added Water to Milk

MOSCOW, June 14.—The wounding of Lyra, record milk producing cow, rural detectives of Ivanovsky Province a puzzling mystery to unravel.

Lyra won honors for the Lenin collective farm by giving 32 quarts of milk a day. No other farm in the Province had a cow that could approach this performance. Neighboring colonies were envious.

About the time a Government inspector was to examine the best cows of the region and award a red ribbon, Lyra was found in a forest far from her barn with razor slashes in her udder.

It took amateur sleuths a long time to run down the criminal and when finally they forced a confession the surprise was greatest for the farmers of the Lenin colony.

Kuzina, the milkmaid under whose care Lyra had risen to champion, confessed that she and her 11-year-old daughter had committed the crime. Subsequently, it was disclosed that Lyra would never have been a champion had the milkmaid not added water to the milk. Fear that the inspector would discover her fraud prompted Kuzina to commit the act. She is held for trial.

ATHENS, June 14.—The Greek Government intends to hold a plebiscite in September, officials say, to enable the people to determine whether there should be a restoration of the monarchy.

Republicans announce that a general amnesty for persons imprisoned after the March revolt must be granted before Republican voters will participate in arrangements for the election. Premier Tsaldaris said an amnesty was out of the question.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Mr. Hay and the Constitution.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
THAT jolly old cherub, Charles M. Hay, has taken up arms against the Constitution. It is too old. It is a foggy, its inhibitions were for other people, and in these modern times, have become empty flounders. That is his credo. Who is Mr. Hay? Why, he's the dullest thing Missouri has ever seen, with the possible exception of 1934. He is the same Mr. Hay who, on another occasion, proclaimed the Constitution practically worthless unless it could be amended to prohibit the manufacture and sale of liquor. With prohibition, Mr. Hay shouted, poverty would end and crime would be relegated to limbo. Utopia was just around the corner. It was in the atmosphere of that halcyon sunrise that the eighteenth amendment was born. And so far as Missouri was concerned, it was Mr. Hay's own baby.

That amendment not only destroyed private property worth millions of dollars without compensation, but the barnacles, nickel-pickers and thugs that it turned loose upon the country constituted the most pestiferous visitation since the bugs dropped in on ancient Egypt. Today, prohibition is but a billious memory, and Mr. Hay is the melodic soloist for an administration as wretched as the river bottoms. But could this possibly be the same Mr. Hay, who, during the war, invaded the quinine belt, told the natives the world was being made "safe for democracy," and committed verbal assault and battery upon anybody who had the courage to tell the truth? This is the same Mr. Hay. Well, in this era of dictators, big abdomens and hokey dissemination with trowels, it may be possible to mess up the Constitution, but Mr. Hay's prophecy of the benefits that are bound to accrue recalls the old farmer whose wife was ill. A neighbor, meeting him on his way to town, inquired: "Well, Louie, how's the frau?" "Achi!" exclaimed Louie, "Lena vas gettin' mo' veser den she is beddahn."

Boy Scouts and Lindbergh Trophies.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

DURING August of this year, several thousand Boy Scouts from all over the West will pass through St. Louis in special trains on their way to the Boy Scout Jamboree at Washington, D. C.—and the chances are that, under present arrangements, they will be in St. Louis only long enough for a change of train engines and crews.

It occurs to me that the City of St. Louis would endear itself in the memory of every one of those boys if some arrangement could be made with those in authority for the trains to be held in your city long enough for the boys to see the Lindbergh trophies. If the exhibit is too far from the Union Station for the boys to walk, perhaps the various civic clubs, etc., would arrange transportation from the station to the exhibit and back.

Inside Job.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE dastardly, though unquestionably enterprising, scoundrel who stole your dictionary is not brought to heel, Edgar Allan Poe and Arthur Conan Doyle lived and went in vain. Simple ratiocination, deduction and elimination point very clearly, in a general way, to where you will find your 15-pound volume.

No one from merely reading a newspaper could suspect that the writers thereof had access to so authoritative a tome as one of 3000 pages must necessarily be; therefore, it was an inside job—no outsider being aware of the existence of the corpus delicti.

All editors and executives, being dignified and honorable gentlemen, are as Caesar's wife. If it were a bartender's guide or a file of the Daily Racing Form we sought, the reporters might be suspect, but their languorous and effete dispositions absolve them, in the present case, along with the copy boys.

Compositors are prone to leave complex orthography to the proof-readers—and proof-readers know their verbs, adjectives and whatnot. Photographers, photo-engravers, stereotypers and pressmen are mechanically minded men who rarely show an abiding interest in the obscure reaches of the language.

The denouement, I believe, is perfectly evident. If this engaging crime was not committed by a low, irreverent person who would trade your magnificent book for a mess of pottage, you need only locate among your varied personnel a young, energetic father who has a child in the high-chair and one not quite graduated from it. Elementary, my dear editor, elementary!

M. LECOQ.

A Code of Ethics Needed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We do not need in this country such a regimentation of business as was established by the present administration. What we do need is a rigid code of business and professional ethics, supported by the laws of the land, to prevent undue exploitation. For there are buccaners in finance just as there were once buccaners on the high seas. Under a proper code of ethics, rigidly enforced, let private initiative have full sway. Then, and only then, will we have recovery.

PASS THE CITY'S WORK PROGRAM.

The Board of Aldermen has before it a program of legislation which the Mayor has urged it to pass before adjourning for the summer vacation.

Most of the bills are for public improvements, many to be financed in part at least by Government funds. These bills, if passed, will not only improve municipal services, but they will create work for hundreds of men who otherwise will be idle during the summer months. We list the purposes of some of these bills:

To purchase land for a new City Hall power plant and to erect the plant. To build a new power plant at City Sanitarium. Failure to do so may endanger lives, considering the condition of the present boilers.

To eliminate the Ivory avenue-Missouri Pacific grade crossing at Federal expense; also to prepare for other grade crossing eliminations to be financed under the new Federal $4,880,000,000 appropriation. It would be folly for the city not to take advantage of this offer at the earliest opportunity.

To construct two sections of the Southern Arsenal relief sewer under PWA grants, to prevent storm damage over a large area; to build the Compton avenue and Stein street sewers; to build additional downtown sewers and to continue repair of the Western Mill Creek sewers.

To purchase a site for the psychopathic hospital, adjoining City Hospital, which will relieve crowding and promote efficiency in caring for patients.

To construct a second garbage grinding plant to meet the requirements of summer.

To purchase the remaining property needed for the express highway, between Vandeventer avenue and Kingshighway.

It is hardly necessary to do more than mention these bills to illustrate their desirability, particularly in view of the many jobs they would create.

We trust that the Aldermen and the Mayor will find some way to patch up their difficulties, but even if the feud continues, it should not be permitted to interfere with something that should be above and beyond partisanship, namely, the city's public improvement program.

This is a responsibility which no municipal assembly can lightly evade.

IT'S DR. FORD NOW.

Colgate University has made Henry Ford a doctor of laws, and, as he appears pictorially, in cap and gown, the discoverer of mass production, which is only a step short of perpetual motion, looks like a doctor of laws. He bears his blushing honors with scholarly sang froid.

He exemplifies, too, the truth of an old saying, though whether Emerson said it, or Shakespeare, or Bacon, is a row to evade when June at last is boiling June. We are thinking, of course, of the assurance that the world will beat a pathway to the door of the man who makes the best rattletrap. Henry Ford did precisely that. True, the rattletrap stage of his triumphant march is ancient history, but such was Model T, that Yorick-like chariot of infinite jest.

These observations, we are aware, require an addendum. Always around the corner lurks that kill-joy, the accuracy addict, waiting to pounce upon the slightest fumble. It was not a rattletrap, he will sagely remind us, which Milton or Huey Long or Dizzy Dean proffered as the symbol of success; it was a mousetrap. Very well. Having silenced the rectifying guns, we tender congratulations to Dr. Ford.

AN AGRAMONTE PENSION.

A bill is pending in Congress for a small annuity for the widow of Dr. Aristides Agramonte in recognition of his part in the conquest of yellow fever, made familiar to thousands by the Sidney Howard-Paul De Kruif play, "Yellow Jack."

Dr. Agramonte, Cuban member and last survivor of the heroic "Reed commission," had arrived in New Orleans a month before his death, four years ago, to organize a department of tropical medicine in Louisiana State University. He had been professor of bacteriology in the University of Havana since 1900, when he served on the United States Medical Corps Research Commission headed by Walter Reed. His comrades were James Carroll, who caught yellow fever "in the line of duty," and Jesse Lazear, who died of it. These four men convicted the stegomyia mosquito when the part of insects in the spread of human epidemics was almost wholly unsuspected. They ran counter to every respected hypothesis on their problem, and apparently Dr. Carlos J. Finlay, the Cuban practitioner who insisted this common house mosquito might be the culprit, had been regarded as a little cracked on the subject.

The commission's work was possibly the most dramatic and conclusive vindication of an unpopular theory in medical records, and certainly it was one of the most immediately useful to the world. Yellow fever had raged in Havana for 150 years. It had driven the French from the Isthmus of Panama, and it had swept the Americas as far north as St. Louis and Philadelphia and New York, with epidemic death rates as high as 85 per cent. Dr. Agramonte and his comrades made it possible to clean up Havana in two years, to build the Panama Canal, and to sweep a scourge of centuries from all the earth but two small areas in South America and West Africa. Certainly the world, particularly the United States, owes much to that commission, and certainly Congress cannot allow the widow of one of its chief benefactors to lack the modest comforts of age.

BOTH SIDES LOSE.

The present plight of Europe gives eloquent testimony to the futility of war, and now more evidence to the same effect is available in South America. The exhibits are Bolivia and Paraguay, financially exhausted and drained of their best manpower after years of warfare in the Chaco region. At least 100,000 men, it is estimated, have given their lives for their countries, although scarcely more than that number were ever engaged at one time. Enemy bullets took the smallest part of the toll; greater losses were inflicted by poisonous insects, deadly snakes, fever and hunger and thirst suffered in steaming swamp and matted jungle.

Bolivia has borrowed heavily to pay for the war, and defaulted. Paraguay entered the war with no foreign debt; the present armistice finds her heavily burdened. Both countries have undergone great economic losses. Bolivia has had a revolution, and each nation faces serious post-war problems.

And all for what? One of the armistice terms is recognition by both belligerents of the Pan-American declaration of Aug. 3, 1932, that "territorial conquest by arms confers no sovereignty." Paraguay, though now in possession of the disputed region, must submit her conquests to arbitration. Both nations had rejected several previous peace plans, but now exhaustion forces them to leave the issues to a conference. Their tragic losses count for virtually nothing in the indicated outcome. Was there ever a more complete demonstration of the value of settling international disputes by peaceful means—before instead of after hostilities?

ITALY BARS THE TIMES.

This business of occasionally barring certain foreign publications, a favorite pursuit of the dictators, has a strange ring to citizens of democracies, accustomed as they are to their own free press and to reading whatever outside journals they please. Citizens of Italy, on the other hand, have for their enlightenment only a kept and regimented press, and such foreign publications as have not incurred the displeasure of Il Duce. The New York Times committed the offense of criticizing dictators in general, and Mussolini in particular, so now no Italian may read its columns "until further notice."

Has the Italian dictator strengthened himself by barring the Times? We do not think so. The Times' editorial may have been rough on Mussolini, but its news columns have always been fair to him, or even more than fair. In fact, the Times has been criticized for the alleged pro-Fascist bias of its Rome correspondent. It would not be surprising if the Times in future gave no ground for such criticism.

What does Mussolini expect from newspapers in democratic countries? He has frequently spoken his contempt for the democratic process. America is a democratic country by tradition and popular conviction. It is only natural for one of its leading journals to uphold democracy and frown on dictatorship. So the Times observes that dictators can govern under martial law, but "to do it with the courts open and the press free is another matter. They last only so long as they can maintain themselves by force."

This is true, and by excluding the Times from Italy, Mussolini admits it. How differently this sort of thing is done by a democracy is illustrated by the anecdote of Mr. Roosevelt's reception of Col. Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News. The News has been bitterly critical of the Roosevelt administration, but when the Colonel called on the President to present a characteristic News editorial, Mr. Roosevelt received the publisher cordially. Of the editorial, he said pleasantly, "That's all right."

This is what Jefferson said when he was urged to suppress a newspaper which attacked him persistently. The man who did more than anyone else to give America a free press refused upon the score that if he suppressed the paper, he would do democracy far greater harm than it could do him.

So it is with Mussolini. By excluding the Times, he has done himself far more harm than the Times could do him.

IS THE PUBLIC BEING SPOOFED?

That slogan, "Save the Constitution!" adopted at the "grass roots" convention in Springfield, Ill., may be a little embarrassing to Republican members of Congress.

Someone may rise to inquire why, since the Republicans pledge themselves to rescue the historic document, representatives of the party in Congress voted as they did on measures since thrown out as unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

On the outstanding measure of that kind, the NIRA, a majority of the Republicans in the House voted Aye. Ten Republican Senators did likewise.

Almost 60 per cent of the vote of Republican Senators was in favor of the Frazier-Lemke Act, which passed the House without a record vote. This act was declared unconstitutional by a unanimous decision of the Supreme Court.

Not a single Republican Senator voted against the Railway Pension Act, which also passed the House without a record vote. It, too, was thrown out by the Supreme Court.

It would make a more convincing showing if the Republicans in Congress and the grass-roots could present a united front on the issue of preservation of the Constitution. As it is, the public may decide it is being spoofed.

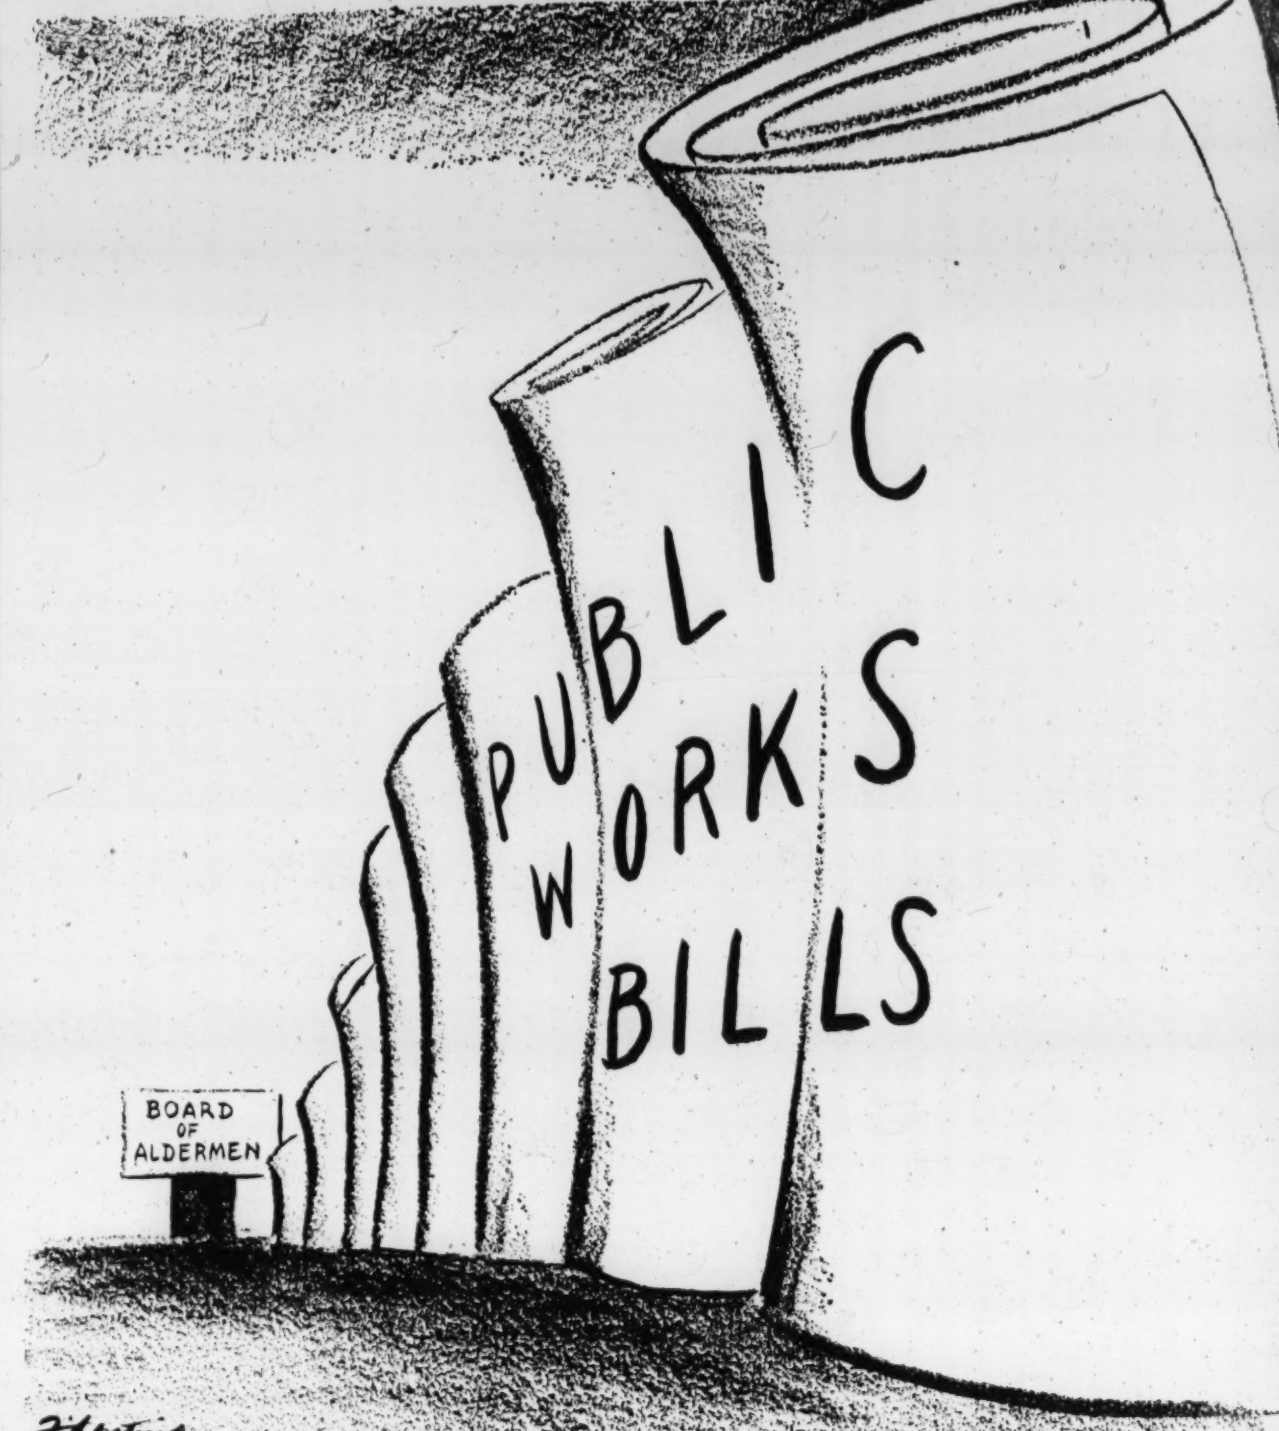

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S MONEY PROBLEM.

Latest figures on the Board of Education budget for the coming fiscal year have accentuated the need for a thorough study of the financial problems of the public schools, which should be carried out before it may become too late. The Post-Dispatch has suggested an impartial study of the board's needs by a recognized and qualified agency, such as one or both of the local universities or one of the national educational foundations.

For the year starting July 1, board income has been estimated at $9,700,000 and expenditures at $10,200,000. The deficiency of $500,000 will be met only because the board will close the current year with a surplus of $1,300,000. The end of the next fiscal year will see the surplus reduced to $800,000. If the same scale of income and expenditure is continued, there will be a surplus of only $300,000 July 1, 1937—and an actual deficit of $200,000 July 1, 1938. A cure must be achieved; the sooner the better.

School officials have asserted it would be difficult to reduce expenses further without impairing or eliminating educational services which the people should have. Indeed, costs for many supplies the board must buy have been rising. There are numerous items of expense which have been eliminated from the budget, at least some of which should be restored. The system of automatic increases to reward continued service in the instruction department may be renewed in the next year. The 10 per cent reduction of pay of all school employees, in force for three years, should be ended as quickly as possible. The size of classes, increased to save money, should be reduced in order to permit more personal instruction and less demand on teachers' strength. Many persons want the summer schools restored; others desire more subjects and longer terms in evening schools. Thorough maintenance of school buildings must be renewed, and the time is coming when more buildings and equipment will be needed.

The maximum annual tax rate of 85 cents on the $100 valuation has been authorized for the schools through 1937. The people could authorize a rate as high as $1 for the ensuing four years in 1938, but any increase of the rate should be avoided if possible. The board cannot now count on a business recovery which would greatly increase the volume of taxable property. The answer to the problem may lie in a painstaking survey to determine what economies might be adopted which the board and its officers have not been able to see and what additional income may be found, apart from the general tax.

WAITING.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

By Walter Lippmann

Judges as Presidential Candidates.

IN SUMMING up the "net results" of the "grass roots" conference, Theodore Wallen of the New York Herald Tribune said, among other things:

"It tended to set the stage for the nomination of a strict constructionist of the Constitution, thus virtually eliminating Associate Justice Harlan F. Stone of the Supreme Court, while leaving Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts in a preferred position."

Mr. Wallen is an accurate correspondent and his report faithfully reflects the fact that there is a considerable interest in the idea of going to the Supreme Court for the Republican candidate in 1936. The idea is that Mr. Justice Roberts, having decided against New Deal measures, is to run as the savior of the Constitution.

While nothing may come of this boom, the mere fact that it is seriously considered is certain to cause acute embarrassment to the Supreme Court as a whole and to Mr. Justice Roberts in particular. It means that as long as the boom lasts, every vote cast by Mr. Justice Roberts or Mr. Justice Stone will be examined by the politicians and by the political commentators for its bearing upon the campaign of 1936.

These judges have still to sit in judgment upon much of the New Deal. Could anything be more unfair to them, more harmful to the court, or more destructive of popular confidence where two of the Justices are treated as candidates who stand to win or lose the greatest political office in the land? And what could be less edifying than a political campaign in which a Justice of the Supreme Court was defending his judicial opinions from the end of a railroad car?

It is true that the present Chief Justice, Mr. Hughes, left the Supreme Court in 1916 to accept the Republican nomination. There are few, I believe, who would say that he established a good precedent. But at least this can be said for Mr. Hughes in 1916: the issues of the day turned on neutrality and war, and the opinions of the court were not involved in the partisan conflict. But now it is proposed to make the campaign on the very issues which the court is called upon to decide, and it is nothing less than an outrage to suggest that a member of that court should be a partisan candidate in such a campaign.

The authority of the court is one of the most extraordinary things in the history of government. Here are nine men who, without physical power of any kind, can, under certain conditions, override the will of Congress and the President. Their verdicts are obeyed absolutely.

On what does the power of the court rest? It rests on the conviction of the people that the court interprets the disinterested and considered and permanent judgment of the people as against the momentary, impulsive, expedient and short-sighted opinions of temporary majorities. In the annals of democracy the court stands forth as a unique institution. For the first time in the history of popular government, the people themselves have imposed upon themselves a comprehensive restraint to which they willingly submit. This is a very great thing.

The court represents the people's own moral conviction that they must not act hastily or arbitrarily; that there must always be an appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober; that the voice of reason must in the end prevail over the prompting of appetite and of impulse.

All of this depends upon the people's own belief that the court is above all ordinary worldly temptation. Everything has been done to give the justices independence, inviolability and prestige, so that they may be, and so that they shall be believed to be, beyond the daily struggle in political affairs. And yet now the fervent defenders of the Constitution are seriously considering the nomination as an opponent of the New Deal of a judge who must sit in judgment on the New Deal.

The mere talk about this boom creates mischief so serious that it may require some decisive action to dispose of it. The court is adjourned for the summer. But if, when the court reconvenes in the autumn, the boom has not been completely deflated, Mr. Justice Roberts will be compelled to take notice. No one knows better than he, a man of the highest judicial integrity and sensibility, that he cannot for a moment appoint himself to the administration and continue to be discussed as a Republican candidate. If the boom is not destroyed first by responsible Republican leaders, his choice will be to destroy it himself or to resign from the bench.

There ought not to be any real hesitation about the proper course. Now is a very good time to put an end once and for all to the idea that Justices of the Supreme Court are available candidates for political office. This would make a very good first plank in a program to defend the Constitution and the Supreme Court as its final interpreter. A man who accepts appointment to the Supreme Court should be regarded as having forever renounced all other worldly ambitions. The nature of the institution demands that candidates for appointment, the Justices who are appointed, and the nation, should look upon the court as the summit of a career beyond which there is nothing in the way of office, honor or material gain to be won or lost.

EUROPE'S BLIND NATIONALISM.

ALLAN NEVINS in Current History.
UNDER leaders like Hitler and Mussolini, nationalism has become blinder, more intense and more hysterical than ever. The sense of the solidarity of Europe and of reverence for its great cultural traditions has declined; the feeling of the inevitability of war has grown.

The spasm of rage that ran through the Reich as a Lithuanian court-martial imposed heavy sentences on the Nazis of Memei, the demonstrations in Italy as the dictator recalled another class to the colors, the childish military displays in capital after capital are deeply disquieting. They indicate that only a spasm of rage is needed to set off a tremendous explosion.

Europe, still trembling with weakness from the last war and still near the bottom of the most pitiless economic depression in history, needs every ounce of her strength for industrial and cultural recovery. Instead, every great nation is wildly expending money and energy to increase its supply of lethal weapons. It is crippling its commerce, increasing its financial burdens and injuring itself and its neighbors with insensate energy—all because the collective wisdom of the leaders of the world has proved unequal to the task before them.

Is Science Lagging?

From the New York Times.

DRAW an engineer or a chemist into a discussion of our economic problem and his solution is simple: Give us more discoveries and inventions. He cites the telephone, the automobile, radio and a hundred inventions to prove that he and his kind create new industries, satisfy new wants, make more work.

Charles F. Kettering in a recent address pushed the argument to the extreme. No our social institutions, but our technical innovators, are at fault. In fact, the worthless, usually charged with being far too ingenious for our economic good, are not discovering and inventing fast enough. Mr. Kettering wants more "industrial prospecting" of the kind that will "hit a gusher" and "keep us busy for a long time refining the new oil of knowledge."

Alas, it is precisely in the process of refining that the difficulty lies. After the new discoveries are applied, there follows a kind of development that we associate with the displacement of labor. Consider these few instances, cited by the NIRA committee in its study of the automobile industry. In 1930, about 250 men finished 100 motor blocks in a unit of time. Now, 19 men finish 250 in the same time.

A new photo-electric inspecting machine dispenses with 10 to 20 human inspectors. A device operated by liquid air puts rivet inserts in cylinder blocks and reduces labor costs about 60 per cent.

In 1929, the labor cost of one manufacturer's door was $4. In 1935, it is 15 cents. If used full time, an automatic buffer is a hardware plant can displace 50 men. Welding machines enable three men to do what 19 did six years ago.

The British economist, Ravenshear, drew an important distinction between original and intensive inventions. Original inventions, like radio, the telephone and the automobile, give us industries that employ tens of thousands. Soon intensive inventions begin to displace labor in these already new industries. Dials and machine switching drive girls out of telephone stations. Scores of craftsmen who once hand-tailored sheet-steel are displaced by a press that forms an automobile cowl at a stroke.

Even the origination inventions are not always unmixed blessings. Who can deny that the breeders of silk worms in the Far East have suffered by the introduction of rayon? Does the leather industry view the introduction of cellulose substitute for hide with equanimity? Authorities talk of technological unemployment as a major cause of the depression than they did five years ago. The war, uncontrolled speculation, defects in the financial structure and credit system, tariff barriers have exerted a far greater influence. Indeed, the activities of science are the least of our worries. They are but part of a complicated social and economic pattern of which only the barest outlines have been traced as yet.

SHELLEY ON THE NRA DECISION.

From Today.

BELIEVE it or not, it was Percy Bysshe Shelley who wrote the following lines, which seem to make him the first and admirer of a certain august judicial body which recently rendered a certain important decision: "Thou hast a voice, great Mother, in the deep, large code of laws that underlie the world; interpret or make felt, or deeply feel, it. They will be found in 'Mont Blanc,' a poem composed in the Vale of Chamouni in 1816."

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, June 14.—A COMPARISON of wages paid by the Government with those paid by private industry has been made in a paradoxical situation.

While advocating higher wages in the industry, it has been doing just the opposite. Wages paid to relief workers have been definitely decreased.

Here is a comparison of the present wage scale under the work-relief program, as against the scale paid under CWA one year ago. The figures are based on a 40-hour week.

Rate under CWA (cents per hour)	Rate under Work-Relief (cents per hour)
Over $10.00 — 37	25.3
8.00 — 37	25.3
7.00 — 37	25.3
6.00 — 37	25.3
5.00 — 37	25.3
4.00 — 37	25.3
3.00 — 37	25.3
2.00 — 37	25.3
1.00 — 37	25.3
Under $1.00 — 37	25.3

In contrast to this decrease in the Government's pay schedule, the average earnings of common labor in the manufacturing industries rose steadily until the end of NRA.

According to the National Industrial Conference Board, the pay of unskilled male labor now ranges from a low of 23 cents an hour in fruiting factories to 63.2 cents an hour in the plants. The average for the country as a whole is 49.4 cents an hour.

Thus, according to the NICB figures, the average wage is 33.3 per cent higher than the 1932 average.

Chaco Peace.

ARRE credit for ending the war between Paraguay and Bolivia was paid to Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs.

For two years Welles labored to end the Chaco dispute. For two years he put forth every conceivable proposal, sacrificed his vacation, worked until late at night.

"The most successful strategy was to let Argentina take the credit for peace while he remained in the background," he said.

When the final story of Chaco negotiations is told it will feature the drama of a man who put his personal pride ahead of the dead that might have saved on the battlefield.

Too Late.

THE chief American representative at the Buenos Aires peace conference arrived too late to have any part in it. He was Hugh Gibson, American Ambassador to Argentina.

Gibson, a career diplomat, was summoned back to the United States to settle the Chaco dispute. He was asked to fly from Washington to Buenos Aires to get there in time to be traveled by boat, arriving three weeks later—just as the armistice was being signed.

How the fate of important legislation can be determined by unrelated personal factors is illustrated by a controversy now raging between two members of the House.

Representative Dickstein, who is a member of the House Military Affairs Committee, is the bill, urged by the administration, to strengthen the legal powers of the TVA.

The measure was passed by the House in 1932. But a Republican coalition in the House committee refused to give it a favorable report. The administration is now endeavoring to break this deadlock.

A member of the committee is Joseph P. Kamp, a friend and warm ally of Capt. Percy W. Foran, who is a member of the Philadelphia Naval Board.

Foran is an aide to Josephus Daniels, who is the Secretary of the Navy. Daniels is an able, popular man, but in 1931 while in the House he was defeated in his bid for re-election.

As a result of this defeat, the Navy Board has refused to pass the bill.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

GEN. JOHNSON TAKES ROOSEVELT TO TASK

In Magazine Article Implies Loss of Leadership and Spirit.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—To pass him for advancement to the rank of Admiral.

On the ground that this attitude is arbitrary and unfair, Dorsey introduced a bill requiring the Navy Board to give his friend a new examination. Daniels, now Ambassador to Mexico, personally testified in behalf of the measure. Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania and others wrote letters endorsing it.

But Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, which has jurisdiction over the bill, vigorously opposed to it. Dorsey charges that behind Vinson stands the Navy Board. So strong is his feeling about the matter that in reprisal he is threatening to bolt on the TVA issue.

Dorsey voted for this bill in the first test, but he now says that unless Vinson is persuaded to "lay off" his measure to help Dorsey, he is seriously considering throwing a monkey wrench into the administration's plans to get another vote on the TVA legislation.

Texas Bad Men.

WHAT Representative Sam Dickstein thinks of his two cradling colleagues, Vito Marcantonio and Maury Maverick, is unprintable.

This wordy little Tammanyite was a witness at a hearing of the House Judiciary Subcommittee when it considered the Kramer bill. This makes it a criminal offense to advocate the violent overthrow of government. Dickstein is a strong supporter of the measure, and the purpose of his appearance was to explain the need for such legislation.

Instead, and much to the annoyance of the committee, he expatiated for more than an hour on his personal grievances against Communists and how they were "tormenting" him.

"Every night," he cried, "they march and demonstrate in front of my house. When I go home I can't eat. I can't sleep."

At this point Representative Maverick let out a loud, raucous laugh in which the whole room joined. Dickstein was outraged in a towering fury he turned on the Texan and yelled:

"You think that is funny, huh? Well, I'm not taking any more of your kind of humor. You're a Communist. You're a Communist. You're a Communist."

"What organization is that?" called out Representative Marcantonio, "the Mavericks?"

Dickstein, sputtering like a fuse, threw up his hands and quit.

Merry-Go-Round.

BECAUSE of his hard-hitting efforts in behalf of the President's Holding Corporation bill, Texas utility interests have already started a movement to defeat Chairman Sam Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, in next year's election. His district is being flooded with "literature" attacking him and urging his replacement.

Utah's Senator William King is a Mormon and a graduate of Brigham Young Academy. But unlike his former Republican colleague and fellow-Mormon, Senator Reed Smoot, who carried the full name of the institution in his congressional biography, King lists it merely as the B. Y. Academy.

Capital guides report a greatly increased interest among tourists the last few weeks in the new Supreme Court Building. Until next October, when the court resumes its sittings, the structure will be open for inspection, including the private offices, elaborate marble dining room, lockers and shower baths of the Justices.

The Washington office of the FEHA has just received a report on a traffic survey conducted by relief workers of Plymouth, Mass. It states that times have changed greatly since the last year to have wiped out all the passengers, and crew of the Mayflower, who were put to a dent in the next shipload of immigrants.

"Something Distinctly Phony" About Harrison Amendment to Extend Life of NRA, He Writes.

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON, NEW YORK, June 14.—The Navy carried this account of the Harrison amendment in the Senate to extend the life of the NRA.

The President may suspend the laws only as a consideration for continuing the labor guarantee under the NRA, and for inflicting reach trade compacts for unfair competitive practices.

The fair-trade provisions of the law are the activities of science and of our worries. They are but complicated social and economic problems which the barest outlines traced as yet.

It is exactly nothing. People do not agree not to violate the law without this. It is exactly nothing. Congress should pass a law that the President may not enforce.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson criticizes President Roosevelt for an implied loss of spirit and leadership in a magazine article, published today, which is sharply critical of the trend of the New Deal. The former head of the NRA, writing in the American Magazine, calls upon his former chief to go directly to the people and end the present "reckless churning."

"The administration does not need any new plans," he writes. "It does need a little of the spirit and fearless leadership which started the wheel going in 1933. We need one clear pronouncement from the President. When he first went into office he told people frequently what he planned to do and what he was doing. But today 'no man knoweth the mind of the king.'"

The immediate need to restore business activity, to get the people to the people who have grown weary of promises and evasions, is to end the uncertainty and state a policy—good or bad.

"No cheerful geniality will serve 'no roseate forecas' of some vast new emergency," he writes. "The trouble now touches the very fundamentals of government. The time has passed when the people will thrill at the genial timbre of a voice. The voice must say something to clear confusion about more permanent problems than legislation already worked, to which the President devoted most of his recent 'fireside chat.'"

"I do not believe that a pronouncement which merely defines and describes the public works program, and repeats principles already stated and legislation already recommended, will serve as the definition of purpose which this country so sorely needs. We need to know what is not planned and approved as well as what is planned and approved. We are tired of 'what we need for progress is a clear chart of the New Deal from here on—a statement of where we stand at this time and exactly what our aim is for the future.'"

Lippmann Credits Hoover With Starting Recovery Program.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 14.—Walter Lippmann asserts in an article in the Yale Review that Herbert Hoover, rather than President Roosevelt, was the first to embrace the principles underlying the recovery program.

Crediting Hoover with initiating a policy unprecedented in American history, the political writer and lecturer says: "For that reason, it may be said, I believe, that his historic position as a radical innovator has been greatly underestimated and that Mr. Roosevelt's pioneering has been greatly exaggerated."

Leland Brewer Heads Directorate; "Engaged" to Be Given Aug. 7-8.

New officers elected last night by the Mummies, a group which produces amateur theatricals, are: Leland Brewer, chairman of the board of directors; Edward Doody, business manager; Genevieve Albers, secretary; and Olga Becker, public relations chairman.

"Engaged," by W. S. Gilbert, was chosen by the group for production Aug. 7 and Aug. 8 in the courtyard of the home of Mrs. N. E. Marx, 3505 Longfellow boulevard.

the death of NRA. I sell cigarettes at 8 cents a package. I destroy every tobacco store and raise Cain with independent drug stores. I get some idea of how murderous that is, you only need to remember that the Government tax alone on a package of cigarettes is 6 cents.

Having a vast volume of sales and possible profits in everything, a monopolistic chain can use one thing as a loose-leader until it has destroyed all independent specialists competing hanging on the ropes.

Now this is one of the things NRA set out to correct, but it was a thing the Federal Trade Commission permitted, if it did not actually encourage. It gave certain chains which practice these methods a clean bill of health.

Millions of people believe all that NRA officials said about the great benefits of NRA. It was a principal policy of this administration.

The Supreme Court's sick chicken opinion did not say that this philosophy about amending the anti-trust laws was bad or condemn it in any way. The Supreme Court cannot be used as an alibi for this defection.

All those people who believe our representations and followed the Blue Eagle are entitled to a better display of good faith than this.

Their righteous wrath will not be diverted by this flank march. It is a march into the enemies' lines with colors cased and arms grounded. There is something distinctly phony about it.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

THE betrothal of Miss Elizabeth Burton Hanson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Burton Hanson, 227 North Central avenue, Clayton, and William T. Jones Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Jones, 527 Westminister place, was made known at a luncheon and swimming party today which Mrs. Hanson gave for about 30 of her daughter's friends at Algonquin Country Club. At each place at the table was a diminutive sprinkling can filled with roses, and from the spout hung a card bearing the names of the bride and bridegroom-to-be. Each guest also received a bouquet filled with souvenir roses, stevia and blue corn flowers formed the centerpiece of the long table.

Miss Hanson's mother was Miss Nellie Blow Johnson, daughter of Col. Richard Johnson. Her paternal grandfather was the late Peter McLean Hanson. Miss Hanson was graduated from Mary Institute in the class of 1931, and has been attending Washington University since she became a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Mr. Jones prepared Webb School in Belknap, Tenn., for Amherst College, where he joined Beta Theta Pi fraternity. His mother was formerly Miss Ida Mostyn Smith and her father was formerly a judge of the Circuit Court in St. Louis.

The marriage of Miss Hanson and Mr. Jones has been tentatively planned for early winter.

Mrs. I. D. Kelley landed in New York yesterday after a lengthy European trip during which she joined her sister, Mrs. Balfour S. Craig of New York; Mrs. Robert N. Wackmack, Pittsburgh; and Mrs. Wackmack's daughter, Mrs. George W. Crawford, the former Miss Anne Laurie Wackmack of St. Louis. Dr. Kelley met his wife at the pier and will accompany her to St. Louis.

Mrs. Sharp Ezell, 48 Portland place, has gone to Hot Springs, Va., to visit Mrs. Mary Carignan, the former Miss Mary Denman Clark, who, with her children, Lenore and Ricardo, is there for the summer. In her absence, Mr. Ezell, with his wife, will visit her at the Hotel of the Presbytery Church of the U. S. A.

The commission decreed the hearing would be "in camera" despite protests of Buswell's followers who had demanded the public be admitted.

Supporters of Buswell professed to see no reason for the trial, pointing out that he freely admitted he was one of the dissenters who two years ago decided the Board of Foreign Missions was too modernistic to organize their own board and refused to disband it despite orders of the Church General Assembly.

The Buswell faction argued that the dissenters were within their rights under church constitutional law and not subject to censure. This argument was used for Dr. J. Gresham Machen of Princeton, N. J., president of the dissenting Missions Board, when he was tried recently by the New Brunswick Presbytery Judicial Commission, but he was acquitted.

Matsui, who arrived here later to report to his superior officer, said Sung Cheh-Yuan had 70,000 well-drilled soldiers.

A Japanese spokesman said troop replacements had been sent to Shanhaikwan and other railroad points between Tientsin and the Great Wall. The garrisons already in Peiping and Tientsin, he added, would depart for home next Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively.

Report That China Will Send Special Embassy to U. S.

SHANGHAI, June 14.—China was reported today to be planning to send a special embassy to the United States and England on "a difficult and delicate mission."

Close contact with these countries on matters in the Far East was described as an object of the visit. The reports also were being circulated in Nanking, seat of the Nationalist Government.

Officials refused to discuss the subject but C. T. Wang, former Foreign Minister who was mentioned as a possible envoy, conferred with government leaders in Nanking yesterday.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

My dear Mrs. Carr:
I never have any love-life whatsoever? It seems that I must watch all my girl friends go out and have a good time; they bring their boy friends over to my house and have a necking party while I have to sit back and watch them.

The fellows I know all seem to think well of me. They all talk to me, tell me their troubles, and ask my advice as though I am a professional adviser. I never ask me for a date, but I can dance well, dress well and am not bad-looking. I am really going mad sitting at home all the time. I met a nice fellow and I liked him, but it didn't last long. Can you tell me how much I am underweight? I am five feet, six, and weigh 118 pounds.

LOVELESS.
If you can find the sort of "physician" who knows you and who can give you the best of advice, you ought to be able to find a remedy. It is pretty hard for me to do this, when you give no idea of the symptoms. At random, I might say you are too serious and too hard on the boys who talk to you. Perhaps you have not cultivated enough personality and need a little more gaiety in your manner. And possibly my folder "Popularity" might offer you a few suggestions. Send the self-addressed stamped envelope for mailed advice.

San Francisco, Calif.—Pierre L., the pioneers who has been up to Alaska by the Government to farm the country, is taking a lot of cards along. Mr. L. is questioned as to his game preference. Was it poker? Or perhaps? Or did he play blackjack? "I said Mr. L., baring his teeth in a smile. "I don't play no more with these cards. I tear 'em up."

Mass.—An old law was passed on the statute books forbidding the playing of any on Sunday. In the eighteenth century, two striplings were the stocks for throwing up and catching it. This was used to be a form of "Catch" which thing that prevents the in urbanite from going to his club on the Sabbath is the baseball game.

Richester, N. Y.—George O.—a dog that can distinguish between the long-bearded pinochle and the hairy-chested friends are taking it up—usually, to be sure, and usually locked doors, but in the rooms of delicatessens the call longer "150" it is, "Six"—and double that, you child.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I AM a girl 15 years old and am considered nice looking. I have two brothers who are very mean to me. I mean they do not let me have my friends. What should I do about it? My mother says care, but they do. You see, I have no father and they are always trying to boss me. My brothers are both older than I.

JUST WONDERING.
Your brothers feel some responsibility about you and are trying to take care of you, naturally, your father would have had, and which your mother should help assume. They do not want to deprive you of pleasures; but they surely do. You are too foolish to let them boss you. You are too young to be allowed to run free with boys. I just about know that they do not object to your going with a bunch of boys and having a good time, but they do object to your being with a bunch of boys and having "dates" and being with youngsters who have been arrested at the proper age for some reason.

I advise you will realize, when you are a little older, that your brothers have been kind to take care of you. But ask them not to be "bossy" in their manner of talking. Ask your mother to try to make them see that there is a way in the way in which well-meaning kindness is shown.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I AM a stenographer, unemployed at the present time. I would like to offer my services to anyone in need of a stenographer. I will be able to keep a stenographer until I can find a paying position.

Some Unusual Recipes Which Use Asparagus

Directions for Preliminary Cooking as Well as for Making Dishes.

ALWAYS a favorite among the earliest spring vegetables, asparagus lends itself to varied menus.

Perhaps half the appeal which asparagus lends to a meal is achieved through its fresh, delicately-colored "intact" appearance. And the way we cook it will completely make or mar that whole appearance.

Wash the asparagus well, cut off the lower part of each stalk, which is apt to be tough, and tie the stalks together in rather loose bunches.

In the case of old asparagus, it may be necessary to scrape the stems. Stand the stalks upright in a deep pan of boiling water, leaving the tips exposed. Cook, covered, 20 to 25 minutes. Add salt just before asparagus is tender. This method will not destroy the attractiveness of the tips and the steam will cook them sufficiently.

In France, there is a very interesting method of preparing asparagus in combination with certain other vegetables.

Asparagus Parisien
Twenty-four stalks asparagus.
One-half head endive.
One small onion.
One small head lettuce.
One teaspoon butter.
One tablespoon all-purpose flour.
One cup chicken bouillon.
Salt.
Pepper.
Toast.
Cut tough ends from asparagus. Tie loosely in bundles and cook in boiling water 20 to 25 minutes with tips above surface of water. Put remaining vegetables through a food chopper, using coarse knife. Melt butter in saucepan, blend in flour and add chicken bouillon very slowly, stirring continually. Add chopped vegetables, season with salt and pepper and simmer gently for 30 minutes. Serve asparagus on buttered toast, pouring sauce over it. This recipe will make six portions.

Asparagus Shortcake
One standard two-cup baking powder biscuit recipe.
Four tablespoons butter.
One tablespoon all-purpose flour.
One cup milk.
Salt.
Pepper.
Two cups asparagus, cut in one-inch lengths and cooked.
Prepare and bake individual biscuits according to any standard recipe. Break apart and butter with using three tablespoons of the butter. Melt remaining one tablespoon of butter in top part of double boiler. Blend in flour and add milk gradually, stirring constantly until thickened. Season with salt and pepper, adding asparagus and serve on hot biscuits. This will make six portions.

Asparagus a la Jean
Two pounds asparagus.
One-half cup butter.
Two tablespoons pecans, chopped.
Two-thirds teaspoon lemon juice.
Salt.
Dry toast rounds.
Cook asparagus stalks so as to keep the tips intact. Prepare a sauce by melting the butter and combining with the pecans, lemon juice and seasonings. Drain asparagus and serve on the toast rounds with the sauce. This recipe makes six portions.

Asparagus au Gratin
Three tablespoons butter.
Three tablespoons all-purpose flour.
Two cups boiling water.
Two egg yolks.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.
Salt.
Paprika.
Two pounds asparagus.
Few slices stuffed olives.
Grated cheese.
Melt butter in top part of double boiler, blend in flour and add water gradually, stirring until well dissolved. Beat with a rotary egg beater until it thickens and add the well beaten egg yolks. Season with lemon juice, salt, pepper and paprika. Cook asparagus lightly, place in the bottom of a greased casserole and cover with the prepared sauce and olive slices. Sprinkle grated cheese over top and brown in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about 15 minutes. This recipe will make six portions.

Baked Asparagus
Two pounds asparagus.
Six hard-cooked eggs.
Two tablespoons butter.
Two tablespoons all-purpose flour.
Two cups milk.
Salt.
Pepper.
Two tablespoons green pepper, chopped.
One-half cup buttered crumbs.
Cook asparagus in usual manner and drain. Slice hard-cooked eggs. Prepare a white sauce by melting the butter in top part of a double boiler, blending in the flour and adding the milk gradually, stirring constantly until thickened. Season with salt and pepper. Put a layer of asparagus in the bottom of a greased casserole dish, cover generously with the sauce, then a layer of egg slices, continuing until the dish is full. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 minutes. This recipe makes six portions.

How Mervyn LeRoy Won Fame as a Director and Then Married the Owner's Daughter.

HOLLYWOOD, June 13.
WE have always been more or less under the impression that the movie customers cared little about the men behind the motion pictures—the directors who put them on the screen or the studios which sponsored them. A good picture was a good picture whether the director was, say, Lewis Milestone or Joe Blotz and it was still a good picture whether it flew the MGM banner or the struggling flag of the Mascot Studios.

But out here studios and directors mean a lot. The average St. Louis cinema fan knows about Cecil (Bathub) DeMille because of his penchant for self-advertising and his trick, gold-plated swimming pools. A general knowledge of directors, so important to screen followers here, fades pretty rapidly after DeMille's name is mentioned.

And yet no general discussion of the motion picture people would be really complete without a chapter or two about Mervyn LeRoy, a former newsboy who fought his way to the top in the manner fictionized by the late Horatio Alger Jr. LeRoy, long known as "The Boy Director"—a title which, he is happy to say, he has lived down—is not only one of the ace directors of the industry. He is through his marriage to Doris Warner, the father of a little son, Warner Lewis LeRoy, who is the heir presumptive to the vast Warner Brothers' screen business. Of course, long before little Warner Lewis LeRoy was old enough to know what it's all about motion pictures will be fighting the battle of Hollywood with a newer form of entertainment, called television which is scheduled to burst upon the more or less disinterested public next December.

Back in 1900 scientists were talking about some "new process" by means of which shadows might be able to move about and "simulate human behavior on a white cloth curtain." In that same year, on October 15, Mervyn LeRoy, destined to become one of the best known characters in what was then merely an idea, was born in a very small house in the center—far from the best—section of San Francisco. Mervyn then was, and is, one of those rare specimens in California, a Native Son. His parents and their parents before them were also born in the same state and the stories little Mervyn heard at his grandfather's knee were wonderful tales of The Gold Rush.

MR. AND MRS. LEROY at the time of their marriage in 1934

Excitedly young LeRoy followed Roberts into the theater. He wasn't sure what was going to happen, but he hoped for the best.

That, briefly, is the secret of Mervyn LeRoy's success. He has always looked for the best, and he has always been his. Mr. Roberts told the boy that the company needed a newsboy to play a small part in "Barbara Fritchie." All he would have to do would be to climb a tree and yell, "The Yankees are coming."

Before curtain, young LeRoy ran home and told his family the good news. "I'm going to be an actor," he cried. "I get $3 a week and all I got to do is climb a tree and yell."

Mrs. LeRoy, not as enthusiastic as her son, warned him to hang on to the "real thing." If he should fall and hurt himself, she said, "we'd have a hard time raising the money to pay the doctors."

Little Mervyn went on. Just as he was "reading" his lines, something slipped and the lad went tumbling to the floor. His act both literally and figuratively stopped the show. While the players ran to see if Mervyn was hurt, the audience broke into laughter and applause.

They could sing, dance and clown, so there was no reason why success would not be theirs, they figured. They interested an agent in their act and soon the boys were tramping around the country billed as "Two Boys at a Piano."

At first there was plenty of trouble. Often the kids went hungry. But all along LeRoy kept telling Cooper to expect the best.

When one day in a little town in Kansas they were booked at a famous actor.

Excitedly young LeRoy followed Roberts into the theater. He wasn't sure what was going to happen, but he hoped for the best.

small theater. They figured that they might get $25 for the day's work if they were lucky. They were lucky. The manager offered them $62 for their work.

LeRoy isn't superstitious, as he has told his friends on the Warner Bros. First National lot many times. But he just couldn't get it out of his head that 62 would be a lucky number for him. So he adopted 62.

Since then 62 has played an important role in his career. All of his automobiles have had license plates with a 62 in them. Sixty-two can be found in every picture he has directed. For instance, in "Five Star Final," one of the greatest pictures he has ever guided, Edward G. Robinson, the star, made a telephone call, the number of which was Cherry 62.

That Kansas engagement was the turning point in Mervyn LeRoy's life. Luck seemed always with him thereafter. So fortunate was he that he decided to get into the motion picture business.

So, shortly after the World War, LeRoy and his partner separated. "The movies are calling me," he said.

With $200 in his jeans, LeRoy started making the rounds of the studios. The money soon ran out.

He grew desperate. Hungry. Discouraged. In the nick of time he located a job in the wardrobe department of the old Famous Players-Lasky Studio. Salary was $12.50 a week. The youngster, who had made as much as $1000 a month in vaudeville, swallowed his pride and took the position, figuring that some day he might be a big director or producer.

When he wasn't busy sorting costumes, he was standing on a box looking through a barred window and watching a film company at work.

Finally young LeRoy could stand it no more. "How am I ever going to get anywhere sorting costumes?" he asked himself.

So he went to his superior. "I want another job. I want to get somewhere. This business is driving me crazy. I want to get out of this dark room!"

"What can you do besides sort costumes?" the boss asked.

"I can sing and dance," LeRoy said. "I can run a camera like those other guys down there do," he declared, pointing out the window. Actually, he knew not the first thing about a camera.

The Tendency To Take Much For Granted

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

"I HARDLY like to say," writes a young woman, "even to you, what I want to say, and I don't know whether I can make myself clear. But really I must get it out of my system, somehow."

"Briefly, it is this way. There are lots of homes where young folk past 16 don't like their parents, and where brothers and sisters don't like one another even a little bit. Ought we to love a man just because he happens to be our father, if he has never tried to understand us, and has always seemed to find us a nuisance, and is glad we are out of the way?"

"Ought sisters to love one another merely because they happen to be sisters, if they have nothing at all in common, and always irritate one another? And if they ought, why is it they can't?"

"If I put it bluntly, it is because I am stating the fact. It is so even in homes where religion is professed, and it does not seem to make any difference, so far as I am able to see."

How strange it sounds, and yet it is often a fact, judging from what one sees, hears, and knows. In how many homes is there such a sense of strain and friction, even when it does not break out in "rows?"

All of us live under terrible pressure these days, and it tells in our home life. The quiet home of other days is well-nigh gone, our interests are diverse, and we get all away.

Close blood relationship does not always mean love. It is a great pity that people take it for granted that it does. There is the trouble—we take too much for granted on all sides.

Selfishness, of course, is at the bottom of it all. We must win, earn and deserve love, and that asks for tenderness and tact. If we forget, or neglect, and give way to our worst, love may die. If we cannot live with ourselves and keep the peace, we may not hope to live with others, even in the home, without friction. We must cherish and protect and care for the love that comes to us.

Mushroom Sauce
Six mushroom caps.
Three tablespoons butter.
Two tablespoons all-purpose flour.
One cup veal or chicken stock.
One-third cup light cream.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Few grains cayenne.
Dash paprika.
Peel mushroom caps and slice. Saute in butter about three minutes. Blend in flour, stirring up lumps. Add stock gradually, stirring constantly until mixture becomes thick and smooth. Add cream and seasonings and allow to cook for two or three minutes longer. This recipe makes about one and one-half cups of sauce.

Penaboscott mould is a salad entree of sophisticated beauty and flavor. Yellows, pinks and greens contrive a pastel harmony, while salmon and cucumber blend in a happy rivalry of flavor. A fish mould is an attractive shape for the serving of this dish. Crabmeat may be used instead of salmon and the mould may be circled with rings of red and green pepper and garnished with lettuce and wedges of tomato.

A little salt should be added to the berries when making this blueberry pie to take away any flat taste.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

YOU can't believe it, even yet. You try not to think about it. Forget it in work or play. Or worse escapes, perhaps—booze, gambling, dope. But it's no good. Sooner or later the dreadful reality leaps upon you.

Your life has fizzled out. Only yesterday, so it seems, the years stretched before you endlessly, filled with the promise of romance and adventure. And, as you watch an actor on a stage, so you saw yourself going triumphantly down that shining trail, young and eager, always seeking greater and wider cru-

But has your dream come true? No! Instead, your life seems to have shrunk to a prison cell. Not a real cell, of course. No one can see the bars that hold you in, or hear your desperate hammering against the dingy walls. But the bars are there—as real as though they were forged from steel—and you huddle in shadows as deep as the cell. You filled a death cell in Folsom or Sing Sing. Day after day, life goes on like this. No new prospect calling—How has it happened? You don't know. You didn't even know it was happening. Never did you wish that life would shrink like this, or plan for such tragic imprisonment. And always you hated those spineless spirits who let their lives come to nothing, through cowardly compromise or sluggish evasion.

Never—never—would you like that! Better to kill oneself than live like that, smothered in one's own complacent stupidity. No matter what you had to face, you were going to keep life open, keep your own spirit free—always.

And now, at thirty-five, you realize that you've actually become one of them. "Thirty-five"? Why, you're still just a kid, you assure yourself. And yet—in a dreadful moment of honest analysis—you realize that you've lost interest in almost everything. Have grown sour and cynical and all shut in on yourself. Just go plugging along day after day, in a deepening, dreary rut.

"But I can't be blamed for that," you say. "It isn't my fault if times are hard—if nothing ever happens."

No, it isn't your fault if times are hard. But it is certainly your fault if nothing ever happens and you're "all shut in on yourself." Life was meant to be open. You were supposed to be out in circulation. And no matter how hard the times, you could still be out in circulation. You could still be open. You could still be "all shut in on yourself."

There was something in life you feared. Criticism, maybe. Or conflict, or competition, or perhaps it was monotony—solitude—hardship. Whatever it was, you couldn't take it. So you tried to get away from it. And found an escape. Buried yourself in work, perhaps, because you didn't know how to get along with other people. Or in play, because you didn't know how to get along without them. Whatever it was, you found a way to get away from life.

And each time you did, life became smaller, dimmer, sorer. What's the reason for all these spoiled and wasted lives? That's the reason. They couldn't, wouldn't take it. Couldn't face the normal demands and handicaps of human existence. Found some way to avoid that particular phase of reality which was too much for them. And so wallowed themselves away into smaller and smaller cells.

We shudder at the thought of death. We long for perpetual youth. Yet we, ourselves, choose death—and turn our backs on youth.

Life doesn't make prisoners of us. We make prisoners of ourselves. Life doesn't run away from us. We run away from life.

No human can prevent the aging of his flesh. But any human can stay young in spirit—if he'll pay the price. But that price, that punishment, it means doing all the things that are toughest for you to do. Making changes, facing challenges, taking criticism, though you're lazy, cowardly, conceited spirit shrinks from them all. Learning how to endure boredom and loneliness. Or pressure and haste. Learning to take life and ALL of life—AS IT COMES—Without getting choosy. Good and bad alike—hard and easy.

A difficult job! But if you want to stay supple and powerful, ardent and eager, it's the only way. Otherwise—you'll be a wallied-in mummy before you're 40 as sure as God made little apples—and you have only yourself to blame.

Steve, With One Huge Task Accomplished, Plans Another Even Greater, as Usual Disregarding Obstacles.

CHAPTER TWELVE-NINE.

HANNAH PENTECOST did not die, but Steve lost her, nevertheless, for when she rose from her bed three weeks later she was not the same woman he had known. Something had gone out of her, something had vanished utterly. The hurricane had blown away her ardent love of him and planted in its place the seed of a fanatical devotion to their new child. It was an affection that manifested itself in strange and jealous ways.

That was due, in part, to the fact that the baby was puny. It clung to life so feebly that Hannah drained herself of vitality to keep it alive and in consequence her every instinct of motherhood was roused to feverish intensity. For another thing, some subtle, psychological process of fixation had made permanent her resentment at Steve's shortcomings. Gone forever was her gentle, motherly tolerance for the boy-man—she saw his faults more clearly now than ever before and realized that they were incurable—in its place grew an unselfish, impersonal desire to rescue him from the enemy within.

Nor did she give Steve the least credit for saving her life. To her that was God's doing. Having convinced herself that she was going to die she had spent the endless hours of that dreadful night in prayer and the miracle which resulted she considered an act of Divine Mercy. During her convalescence she read her Bible and pondered over it. She was patient, she was reserved, but she was uncompromising; she was quite unlike the Hannah Steve had married.

As the weeks wore on and she regained her health she became more and more self-centered, she learned to live within herself. She, too, now had an "inner room" and Steve, who loved her as devotedly as he could love any woman, lost his touch with and his understanding of her. It was she who named their daughter Faith. The devastation wrought by the hurricane brought Don Manuel from the Capitol and he took charge in person of the relief work along the Costa Norte. When he finally arrived at Puerto Cortez he stopped with the Pentecosts, of course, and there one night in the hearing of Hannah and Dan Marchand Steve exploded a bombshell he had long been saving for the President.

Now that the storm sufferers had been provided for and the towns were being rebuilt, he considered it a propitious moment to spring his surprise. He led up to it by sketching briefly the developments which Don Manuel, Marchand and he had completed and by reporting upon the damage to the fruit business which the blow-down had wrought.

"We've done a fair job," he told them. "Between us we managed to kick out a tyrant, establish a decent political system and provide a pretty good government for this country. Don Manuel has effected his pet social reforms; Dan's dream of a great banana industry founded on bedrock has come true. It's the principal industry of Honduras but it's as hazardous as a crap game and the country suffers more than we do when the dice run against us. Something must be done about it. There's one job left for us and it's the biggest one we've tackled. We've got to open up the interior; we've got to build a railroad."

"CARAMBA!" the President exclaimed. "I never hoped to hear that from you."

"I don't mean a road to Tegucigalpa. I mean a road up the Uluza—one to serve the banana trade first and the Capitol later. You can get along without it, we can't."

Marchand shook his head. "Impossible! It would cost too much."

"Don't consider what it will cost to do the job; think what it will cost not to do it," Steve said forcefully. "And don't call it impossible. We can do anything we set out to do. We couldn't have built it two years ago, now we know—and the world knows—what the fruit business means. The money can be raised."

"He's right," Garcia cried. "The State owns millions of acres; it will grant the entire Uluza valley to anyone who will put through such an enterprise."

"A road to the Capitol would starve, this one will make a profit. It will mean millions for us."

Marchand hesitated before admitting, "I daresay that's true. The Uluza is now practically free from the Panama disease and the potential earnings of those lands would warrant almost any bond issue within reason. The company could afford to contribute heavily with Government backing the securities would sell. It would be a difficult and an expensive undertaking, to be sure—if it went wrong it might even wreck us—but I'm not thinking of that, nor of its money cost. I'm thinking about the cost in lives."

"That's part of the price, Dan." "Certainly. Nevertheless, it's a price I hate to pay. The French tried heavy construction work in Panama and you know the result. It was a ghastly fiasco. There are more men underground down there than on top of it."

"Theodore Roosevelt believes it can be done."

"With the resources of a great nation to draw upon, he'll probably put his canal through. We'd have no such backing for our railroad. Conditions here are even worse than down there. In spite of all Hannah has done, our death rate here at Cortez is appalling. If we start work on this job we'll sentence thousands of poor devils to death. I don't want to face that. I like money, I want to create but I hate to destroy and I'm fed up on taking human life."

"Steve!" It was Hannah speaking. "We've all got enough and more than we need. The business is bigger than you ever dreamed it would be. You men have done everything you set out to do. Why risk all you've accomplished? Why conquer the world? Napoleon attempted that and he left a trail of corpses across Europe. He saw his empire fall. De Lesseps had a dream like yours. He squandered millions; in eight years he lost upwards of 22,000 men. If France failed on thelathmus can you succeed up here? Can you contemplate taking the lives of 20,000 men? I couldn't. No railroad, no industry is worth a price like that."

As his wife spoke the fire went out of Steve's face, leaving it cold, emotionless. The woman knew that expression and read in it the answer to her and Dan's objections. Here was a man with one idea, with a fixed radius of vision; his heart was set upon this project, he believed in it and he considered himself the appointed agent to carry it through no matter what the cost. Argument could not sway him; if men were to perish, he would send them marching to their death. He would lead them.

Marchand was encouraged by the wife's attitude to protest more strongly. Had Pentecost considered the country through which rails would have to be laid in order to serve the interior? These coastal swamps were a formidable barrier. They had defeated more than one invader. The roadbed would have to be built in part over a bottomless quagmire that shook underfoot. It stank of death and the natives dreaded it too deeply to risk its dangers. Labor would have to be imported and that would add to the slaughter; unseasoned workers would perish like flies, for when those myriads were stirred fevers bred. Six months of wallowing in slime like alligators would kill the strongest man, but this job would take years; the builders would have to be housed in the sunless depths of the jungle, they'd be forced to wade by day and lie down in mud-caked garments at night. It meant floating hospitals, an army of doctors, huts built upon piles; a brief, hideous, reptilian existence amid a thousand tortures. Nor could engineering genius estimate the cost in dollars.

Steve was fully aware of all that.

A Type of Child That Is Problem To Community

By Mrs. Brooke P. Church

SAM was a bookish boy, who, owing to ill health went to school rather late. Being small and intellectual he did not fit into the class and found himself severely snubbed and left out by the boys he would ordinarily have played with. In his loneliness he found himself allied with the "tough" group of the school, and was imperceptibly drawn into it. They, too, had been excluded by the better element, and had gradually formed a closed corporation of their own. Many of them were exceptionally brilliant but one or two were vicious.

Smoking, drinking, occasionally house-breaking and "borrowing" parked cars for joy-riding were some of their vices, and Sam, as the small boy, was both mascot and the monkey who pulled the chestnut from the fire. Sam enjoyed the life, but it was not good for either his health or morals.

Teachers and parents alike can do much to help the underdog and over brainy child. He is a very real problem both to the community and to himself. He wants popularity, or at least a place in the world, like any other boy, and gets it where he can.

The same intelligence which tends to shut him off from his own kind may permit him to grasp the reasons for his exclusion. But some one possessed of sympathy and understanding must explain these reasons to him, and show him how consciously to adjust himself to the group. The teacher, who is most often at hand, can do most to help. He can point out to the child his false steps and build up his self-esteem. Sometimes he can even enlist the help of some of the other boys. The parents can do their share by encouraging the child at home to make the grade socially as well as mentally.

Privation. Hardship. Fevers. Death. What did they count for? And why over-estimate the obstacles? The thing could be done; the completed project would bring health, happiness, prosperity, life to other thousands. Profits, too. Profits to the builders themselves, to the republic, to posterity. But profit or no profit the thing must be done. Was Dan growing so soft that he courted drops of sweat? Progress was inevitable. It was the Law. Man's one and only duty to himself was to press on, blaze trails, build, conquer. Cost? What did it matter! This trio had tried their hands to a task. Were they weak enough to drop it half done? That was cowardly. Dan must be getting old. His virility was ebbing.

Play Outfit Overall in all gay colors have taken the "big girl" world by storm. They garden in them, play in them, lounge in them and use them for the beach. Hollywood has adopted this style in a big way and many of the moving picture stars in their off-hours are seen in overalls.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

by WYNN

Saturday, June 15.
If in doubt, don't. If absolutely sure of yourself, check up on everything again and see what you forgot to take into the frame. In other words, today is unreliable on the emotional sector. Be kind to parents and other relatives.

Getting Better.
The planets analyze and deliver for us the life-light of creation. Just as Mars' rays bring us energy or force, and we obtain love from the ray of Venus, so do we get what it takes to grow from Jupiter. If it were not for principle of development, or growth, we would always remain the same, never becoming bigger, or better, than when we started on this planet.

Your Year Ahead.
Your year ahead, especially from the new year, gives you more opportunity to gain through service to others than by stressing your own ends. Watch occupation. Danger: Oct. 7 to Nov. 24; Feb. 8 to March 19, and from June 4.

Double check decisions; be deliberate—it'll save time in the end. (Copyright, 1935.)

Marble Cake.
This will probably recall the days of your grandmother and you will want to try the old favorite once again. White mixture—one cup butter, three cups granulated sugar, one-half cup sour milk, four cups flour, one-half teaspoon soda, the whites of eight eggs, one teaspoon vanilla. Dark mixture—One cup butter, two cups dark brown sugar, one cup molasses, one cup sour milk, three cups flour, one teaspoon soda, the yolks of eight eggs, one whole egg, one teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon nutmeg. Put in pans in layers, alternately, letting the last layer be white. Bake slowly. This will make two loaf cakes that will keep fresh indefinitely.

Cream of Celery Soup.
Mash two cups of cooked fresh celery through a strainer. Add two cups milk, one teaspoon onion juice, salt and white pepper. If not thick enough add a little cornstarch dissolved in one-half cup cold milk. Heat until piping hot and serve.

Puddle Muddle's Animals Hold A Walking Picnic

By Mary Graham Bonner

"A WALKING picnic" growled Jelly Bear. "Is one where we walk and walk and walk and eat berries and delicate leaves and roots and things that we find and drink water from running streams and springs."

"We don't take along any picnic baskets, but we have our picnic as we walk."

"What a fine idea, growl growl!" agreed Honey Bear, and the cubs Blacky and Jupiter got on their hind legs and growled:

"Oh, let's have a walking picnic!" They all agreed that a walking picnic would be a wonderful idea, so Jelly Bear began to lead them. Sweet Face, Honey Bear, the cubs Top Notch, Christopher Columbus, Crow, Willy Nilly all followed. But Willy Nilly felt sad that Rip couldn't be with them.

The ducks waddled along, too, and first of all Jelly Bear thought it would be fun if they played the low-the-leader. It was hard for the ducks to do some of the things that Jelly Bear could do, such as climbing a little way up a tree, but they all tried, and it made it all the more fun when they couldn't perform the same acts so well.

Nor would Top Notch waddle into a brook, though he did put his feet in. They found plenty to eat, delicious springs from which to drink and the walking picnic was a great success.

But still Willy Nilly wished that Rip could be with them. "He'll probably be waiting for us outside your door when we get home," Sweet Face, the lamb, suggested. Willy Nilly's heart was full of hope.

Waiting in the Aisle for a Seat

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

REPUBLICANS threw down the gauntlet in Springfield. If the shoe fits, the Democrats will still wear the high hat.

The G. O. P. played safe by declaring itself in favor of everything that hasn't happened yet.

That must be good politics. For all the rest has been bad.

The series in Springfield was short, and not exactly a victory for the Republicans. Before you can score, you must get somebody on base.

However, it's the cornerstone of the 1936 presidential campaign, and we are glad to hear from the G. O. P. again. We knew we would hear from them sometime, but we thought there would be a foreign stamp on the postcard.
